Sportsmanlike DRIVING

KEEP CAR COSTS DOWN

A rich diet of dollars! If that's what your automobile lives on, it's most likely your fault.

Be wise. Get the best possible economy from your car, advises the AAA driver training book, "Sportsmanlike Driving."

Several practices help do the trick. Gasoline and oil cost money. Learn how to save them.

Avoid racing your engine. Be lightfooted on the accelerator. Racing a cold motor burns as much gasoline as speeding. And everybody knows that speed eats gas.

Avoid over-choking when warming up your motor. Start, drive, and stop smoothly. Shift from low and second gears at moderate speeds. Shut off your engine when waiting.

Never drive with under-inflated tires. Keep your carburetor in order. Keep your car well lubricated. Who wants to pay for burned-out bearings, bushings, and other worn parts? Look after your spark plugs. Keep plugs properly gapped and distributor points in order.

Your pocketbook will wear a smile, if you treat your car right and drive "in the know."

MEANT TO BE SEEN

A new twist for an old trick: it's a camisole that's a bra... and a bra that's a camisole. This charming combination of the old-fashioned and the modern is designed by The H. W. Gossard Co. to help the ladies solve their spring and summer support problems. It's made of a fine white cotton with an all over eyelet embroidery that's so good to look at. The camisole bra is meant to be seen through sheer fabrics. In white, at $5, in most stores throughout the country.

Mrs. Cyrene Barratt of Corvallis is visiting this week in Heppner. Among college students here this week to spend spring vacation with their parents are Bob Jones and Mary Mollahan from the University of Oregon at Eugene; Bob Bennett, Marion Green, Gerald Bergstrom and Gilbert Batty from Oregon State College at Corvallis.
