Beef Cattle Rate Of Gain Tests To be Repeated

Daily gains ranged from 1.6 to 2.8 pounds daily in the second 140-day rate of gain and feed efficiency test carried out by the Gilliam County Beef Cattle Improvement association, it was reported at Condon recently at a field day marking the test close.

Feed costs per 100 pounds of gain for the 65 bull calves varied from $12.80 to $21.60, announced C. K. Barker, Condon, association president. The field day, attended by more than 200, was arranged by Ernest Kirsch, Gilliam county extension agent who serves as association secretary.

Barker also announced that the association would sponsor a third test. He said it would probably be longer and animals would be required to be on hand a month or so before actual test start. This would get them more accustomed to new surroundings.

For the test recently completed, calves were required to be on hand 15 days before its start.

Test basis is tied in with the fact that rate of gain and feed efficiency which tend to go together are inherited in beef animals to a high degree. Purpose of tests similar to that carried out in Condon is to identify calves with ability to convert economically feed to meat; identify bull calves with the ability to gain rapidly; and to select breeding animals on ability to gain quickly and economically.

Dr. Ralph Bogart, Oregon State college animal husbandry department geneticist, scored the calves at the test conclusion with Business being taken care of the entertainment committee were pleasantly relieved of any work as everyone was interested in heating their branding irons in the fireplace and burning same on the new cornice boards.
