'Tooth Rock' Cavity Cures Highway Headache

When man was just a boy, the basaltic fang since known as "Tooth Rock" stood poised on the edge of the cliff near where Bonneville now stands. One day the earth twitched her shoulder and the future Tooth turned a somersault to land bottom-down by the edge of the Columbia far below. When the pioneering engineers of the Highway Department bumped against Tooth Rock on their way up the river, it gave them an engineering headache which they cured by gouging a roadway out of the enamel of the Tooth. That road (shown just above the present highway tunnel) was scenic, but narrow and high up and not at all straight; all out of kilter with modern traffic conditions! So, in 1936 the Federal Forest Service got the chore of straightening things out, which it did by boring a cavity (left center) 21 feet high, 26 feet wide and 406 feet long beneath the old road and right through the middle of the Tooth. It was a $237,500 dental job with an automatic electric lighting plant which starts itself up at dark, illuminates the 400 foot cavity, then quits and turns off the juice when daylight comes. The new way may be short on high, twisting scenery but it gets you from here to there on time and all in one piece.

A Notice of Major Importance to Morrow County Wheat Growers

A proposed new joint contract with adjacent weather research groups is being considered by directors of the Tri-County Weather Research which if accepted will mean decided savings to members of this area.

Two contractors have each submitted bids of approximately $70,000 Flat Fee to provide 12-month weather experimentation under a joint contract with Tri-County, Blue Mountain, Horse Heaven and Big Bend groups for 1952-53. The 1951-52 cost to the Tri-County for 10 months service was $50,000. By combined contract the four areas can save $100,000 over present separate contracts. Tri-County's proportionate share (according to area) of the cost under the proposed new joint contract would be $25,000, or half the present contract cost.

NEW COLLECTION SYSTEM

Directors of the Morrow County Weather Research propose the following new plan to raise its share of necessary funds to fulfill such a contract for continued weather research:

The proposed method to be on the basis of 1/2 cent per bushel of the 1952 wheat crop.

Morrow County members and interested ranchers are urged to attend the Annual Meeting of the Tri-County Weather Research to be held at Igo Grange Hall, 4 miles west of Condon, Thursday, June 5 starting at 10 a. m. This meeting will determine the program for the coming year—It is important that you be present to make your wishes known.

Wheat Growers wishing more complete information on the new proposals are urged to contact

Ralph Crum, Harry Duvall or D. O. Nelson, Directors or Bradley Fancher, Secretary-Treasurer
