What it takes to find oil for you

ot too long ago, within the memory of living men, doration for new petroleum deposits here in the West a matter of discovering oil seeps or drilling on "hunch." E even hunches had a reasonable chance of success. ough methods were primitive, the early Western fields e brought into production at a cost which nowadays uld seem extremely low.

's not so easy today. Most of the easily discoverable deposits have been found. But standard geologists, using seismograph and the great electronic methods, are combing every promising part of America, from Louisiana swamps to the Arctic Circle... and many foreign countries as well. ¶ As oil has become more difficult and expensive to produce, your demand has become greater. More and more of the good things in your life depend on petroleum for fuel, or lubrication, or their actual ingredients.

¶ To do its share in the great new search for oil, Standard alone has spent more than $230,000,000 in the last 5 years. Result: U.S. companies altogether have found enough untapped petroleum to give this country its highest oil reserve in history—four times greater than that of 30 years ago.
¶ Geologists estimate that there are still 1500 billion barrels of undiscovered oil in the earth.
Standard Oil Company of California does everything possible in large scale exploration to increase available reserves.
