New "KP Kit" For Kitchen Planning

A pencil, a yardstick — and an eraser, if you're the experimenting type! — plus a simple new device just designed by kitchen engineering experts are all the tools you need to plan that perfect "custom-tailored" kitchen all homemakers have stored away somewhere in their dreams.

This brand-new "KP Kit" (the "KP" means "Kitchen Planning") was developed by the makers of famous Murray matched steel ranges, cabinets and sinks especially for use by the thousands of homemakers who want to remodel their old-fashioned kitchens or install completely new ones this summer. Using it is as easy as boiling an egg; and, what's more, it's foolproof, free and fun to do!

A cut-out cardboard drawing guide or template, and a carefully-sealed chart marked off in a gridiron pattern of equal squares, make up the handy aid to efficient kitchen layout. Cut-out spaces in the guide represent the areas required for all standard-size gas and electric ranges, cabinets and cabinet-sinks, and also provide for sketching in placement of other major appliances.

By using this new kit, you can arrange your remodeled or new kitchen on paper exactly to suit your family needs, and know in advance that every single piece of equipment you install will fit into place just where you'll find it most useful — whether the room is L-shaped or square, wide or narrow, large or tiny!

As insurance against mistakes in your layout, there's a sample sketch of a properly drawn kitchen plan at the top of each chart, and tips on correct measuring are listed in detail. Drawing guides for window sashes, door widths and even door trims are included. The kits, available for use through Murray dealers in every state, bring to homemakers an easy, sure way to eliminate guesswork in planning their kitchens.

Everyone—including men and teen-agers—is welcome to submit an entry in the contest. The rules are simple to follow. Your entry must be crocheted of mercerized crocheted cotton and must have been completed since January 1, 1952. Then if it wins a special ribbon at the Fair, it will become eligible for the national judging and can compete for national prizes. The sixteen contest classifications include almost anything you might want to make. If you haven't already done so, write now to the fair secretary, N. C. Anderson, Heppner, for a rules leaflet listing the classifications and prizes.

NATIONAL PRESS BUILDING WASHINGTON, D. C.

Is the house getting a fresh paint job soon? If so, remember to protect the shrubbery from stray paint splashes. The best way is to tie it back with ropes, then cover carefully with cloths.

There's no good reason why clothes can't be passed on from one child to another as long as they don't look like hand-me-downs. Oftentimes, an old play suit or dress will look almost store new if given fresh color with all-purpose dye. Try it!

White organdy, so sheer and fragile, is very much in the summer fashion picture. It appears in collars of all sizes and shapes, fills in the necklines of suits, makes up bodice tops and shirtwaists. And some of the prettiest afternoon and evening dresses are also in white organdy.

Have you tried fried chicken in the oven? Yes, in the oven, like this: Roll cut-up chicken in seasoned flour, place in a shallow baking pan and dot generously with vitaminized margarine. "Fry" in a 400 degree oven 15 minutes on one side and then 15 on the other. So crisp and delicious!

To improvise a ring mold for rice, spinach, noodles or meat loaf, place a small pyrex custard cup, greased on the outside, in the center of a deep baking dish. This could also be used as a mold for potato salad.

FAMOUS DOLL COLLECTION ON DISPLAY AT MARYHILL MUSEUM

One of the modern world's most famous doll collections, a 1952 gift to the Maryhill Museum from the Dress Designers Association of Paris, is now on view in the recently opened gallery at Maryhill, Washington. A liberal education of fashions, the tiny doll mannequins are clothed in miniature reproductions of Paris models all designed and made by the leading fashion houses of France. They are constructed with flexible wire bodies that can be placed in completely life-like poses and have exquisite little heads molded from original sculptures by Rebull.

The costumes, many of them traditional in design, are each an exact replica down to the tiniest detail. The miniature embroideries, brocades, prints and feathers are all incredibly perfect. The hair-dos and accessories, too, represent the fashion trends since the war. Hundreds of shoes, gloves, bags and umbrellas add a realistic touch to the display.

For several centuries it has been the tradition of the Paris designers to send dolls as ambassadors of French fashions to the capitals of the world. Mme. Bertin, the favorite designer of Marie Antoinette, used to send dolls' dresses in the models she created especially for the Queen of France to all the courts of Europe. Again, in 1945, at the close of the war, the designers and artists of France assembled more than two hundred costumed figurines to send about the world. Months of preparation by the weavers, the lace-makers, the shoemakers, the silversmiths, umbrella, glove and leather workers of France were necessary for the final completion of the fabulous collection. It is estimated that cost of labor alone in the making exceed three hundred thousand dollars. First shown at the Louvre, in Paris the exhibition toured the leading museums an galleries of Europe, England and Scotland, and then came to the United States for showing in New York and San Francisco. It was received everywhere with enthusiastic praise. The collection now becomes a permanent part of the exhibits at the Maryhill Museum where they can be seen any day during the open hours. 9:30 to 5:30. The museum is located at the junction of Highway 830 and 97, 12 miles south of Goldendale, Washington.
