ASKS INVESTIGATION

An investigation of the State Tax Commission was called for in a statement issued this week by Howard Morgan, Democratic State Chairman.

Morgan's name has been mentioned as a successor to Robert Maclean, who last week gave the State Board of Control his resignation, effective September 20.

"I am definitely not interested," said Morgan when asked if he was a candidate to succeed Maclean.

Latest report is that Maclean will withdraw his resignation.

UNDERGROUND PARKING

An underground parking lot in the Capitol Mall was considered this week by the State Board of Control. Following a suggestion by Francis Kealy, New York architect, the board ordered estimates for the underground parking lot underneath the sunken garden, directly north of Court Street. Jerome McDevitt was employed to work out preliminary plans and costs for the consideration of the board.

CROWS BLAMED

The State Department of Agriculture this week blamed crows for spreading pullorum disease among Oregon turkeys.

The crows pick up the disease from egg shells dumped along a creek near an egg-breaking establishment and from hatchery castoffs dumped in the fields for fertilizer. They then carry the disease to turkey flocks, where

STATE FAIR SETS RECORD

The 87th Oregon State Fair, opening August 30 for an eight-day run has broken records for advance seat sales, entries for premiums, exhibition space and race entries.

This kind of news travels fast. Now almost everyone in Oregon is aware that this year's state fair will be the greatest in the state's history.

State fairs are becoming more popular over the nation. In the last three years four more states have adopted a state fair for the visual educational and know-how demonstration values the afford on many subjects that augment better living—and all in a holiday.

The State Fair Commissioners and Manager Leo Spitzbart are in accord in holding admission prices down to those prevalent for the last 20 years.

Television will be both produced and shown at the State Fairgrounds during the State Fair. Two cameras will be used in producing real shows with the image and the sound.

NEW LEGAL OPINIONS

Attorney General George Neuner this week gave the following opinions on Oregon laws:

Governor Douglas McKay does not have authority to expend money from his emergency fund to indemnify owners of hogs slaughtered by order of the State Agriculture Department because of being infected with vesicular exanthema.

(Owners of hogs destroyed by state order have two alternatives of recouping their losses. One is going into the courts and the other is filing claims with the next legislature.)

A covenant deed given in 1883, prohibited the sale or disposal of intoxicating liquor upon the granted premises, is unenforceable by reason of grantor's and assign's acquiescence in permitting the use of property for sale of liquor for many years, and by reason of their failure to assert a right of reentry within a reasonable time. The forfeiture clause does not constitute an encumbrance upon title so as to prohibit the issuance of a home loan to a veteran by the director of veterans' affairs.

CAPITOL HEAT WAVES

Recent remull of a story that grew musty two years ago is that Senator Condon will resign after the first of the year, Governor Douglas McKay will then resign, making Senate President Paul Patterson governor, who will appoint McKay to the unexpired term of Condon.

Nothing wrong with the story except that none of the alleged participants plays that brand of politics.

AND ANOTHER THING

Loyalty oaths were not the only oaths that were difficult to handle at the late presidential conventions. Keeping swear words out of the mikes was Occupation Wow for the radiomen, returned delegates report.

Eddie Brosnan, Heppner, member of the Sandhollow-Buttercreek Livestock club will have the distinction of exhibiting the youngest lambs at the Morrow County Fair and Rodeo.
