BACKYARD PICNIC PUNCHES

INFORMAL backyard picnics are fun and entail less work than packing a lunch to go on a picnic at a distance from home. The younger set will delight in getting the gang together for frequent picnics, and it's a good way to entertain in summer.

A main attraction could be a big bowl or tub of punch made with fruit juices and pale dry ginger ale. Fruit juices and pale dry ginger ale blend their flavors in many excellent punches. For quick preparation, canned and bottled fruit juices and the frozen concentrated juices are a convenience. For best results, ingredients should be pre-chilled, and use plenty of ice in your punch. For eye appeal, garnish your punch with lime, lemon or orange slices.

Here are two simple, but delicious recipes, using canned juices.

Picnic Punch

2 1/2 cups apricot nectar
2 1/2 cups unweetened pineapple juice
1 cup lemon juice
1 cup sugar syrup
2 28-oz. bottles pale dry ginger ale

Combine fruit juices and sugar syrup over ice in bowl, blending well. When ready to serve, add chilled pale dry ginger ale and stir gently to mix. Makes about 20 punch cup servings.

Apple-Grape Punch

4 cups apple juice 1/2 cup lime juice
3 cups grape juice 1/2 cup sugar syrup
2 28-oz. bottles pale dry ginger ale

Combine fruit juices and sugar syrup over ice in bowl, blending well. Add pale dry ginger ale when ready to serve, stirring gently to mix. Makes about 25 punch cup servings.
