The telephone rang. "This is Mrs. Jones," a lady said, "you may recall my husband passed away a couple of months ago. Now I'm trying to get everything in order. But frankly, I found a safety deposit box full of insurance policies and I don't know quite what they're all about. Would you mind helping me out?"

"Indeed not," I answered, "we know it is difficult to analyze insurance policies when you are not familiar with them. Let's meet at the bank."

Mrs. Jones' husband had been a well-to-do farmer. He had eleven policies with several agents. These policies covered buildings, equipment, machinery, trucks and cars, house and furniture, and farm liability. Naturally the situation was confusing.

In a few days we saw Mrs. Jones again. We handed her a folder which provided a summary of her insurance coverages and our recommendations.

"That's fine," she said. "I sincerely appreciate your help. And I want you to look after all my insurance in the future. Will you watch it for me?" Naturally, we would and DO. May we help you with your insurance problems?
