Missionary Society Holds Annual Fall Meeting Friday

The annual fall meeting of the Union Missionary Society was held Friday afternoon at the Christian Church with Mr. and Mrs. Emil Rilling of Richmond, California as guest speakers. The Rillings are en route to Southern Rhodesia where they will spend a five year tenure as missionaries to the natives of the Zambesi River valley. They expect to sail from New York about the middle of February and at present are engaged in visiting various communities to tell of their work. Mrs. Rilling explained that Southern Rhodesia is situated on the East coast of Africa and is comparable in size and climate to our own California. From the time that David Livingston visited the Zambesi Valley as a missionary until 1941, there have been no missionaries in that particular district and the people are pagans in their mode of living and type of worship. They live off the land but their farming principles are very crude so the Rillings plan to introduce modern methods of agriculture so that the crops will be larger and better. One interesting fact in this connection was the monkey pest. When the seeds are planted the farmer must guard his fields against the incursions of the monkeys that inhabit the land or there will be no crop to reap. Other animals dwelling in the district are lions, elephants and zebras as well as the many types of reptiles and insects common to the jungle country. The Rillings have had some training in medicine and will establish a dispensary for the treatment of diseases among the natives—one being the dreaded sleeping sickness. Mr. Rilling came from Three Hills, Alberta, Canada and is well versed in farming practices. Mrs. Rilling is no stranger to Heppner having taught vacation Bible School here in 1950. She will be remembered as the former Miss Phyllis Casebolt.

Others on the program included the opening prayer, Rev. Earl Soward; solo, "The Lord's Prayer"; Oliver Creswick accompanied by Mrs. J. O. Turner at the piano; and Benediction by Rev. J. Palmer Sorlien.

Following the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed.
