"I'm planning a trip," Jim said, "what is the situation with regard to the need for auto insurance in other states?"

"You've raised an important point," I replied, "for nearly all states impose heavy penalties on motorists who cannot meet judgments arising out of accident. In fact, in most, you can't drive your car if you are involved in an accident and are unable to prove your financial responsibility."

"Does that apply to tourists?" Jim asked.

"Yes, definitely, Jim. It applies to non-residents as well as residents. If you can't establish your responsibility immediately, you are sure to suffer long delay, possible attachment of your car, maybe a stay in jail, and other costly complications."

"That's a good warning," Jim replied. "I didn't realize quite how important it is to have public liability and property damage insurance."

"Yes, and most important of all, the proper insurance will prevent serious—perhaps disastrous—financial loss arising from a car accident."

Jim said, "Make sure I have the kind of car insurance I need. I want to travel without worrying."
