Across The Counter By Frank & Van

You've probably never thought of it. BUT you may be engaged in a private fire insurance business of your own. Why? Because if you sustain a big loss by fire on your house or the contents, the chances are 3 out of 4 that you don't have enough insurance. This means you'd have to stand a large share of the cost of re-building or replacing the property yourself.

These are not "make-believe" statistics. A leading fire insurance company recently reviewed recent settlements and announced the results. On the average, for major fires, the company could pay ONLY 40% of the loss sustained because the homes were under-insured. This means the home-owner was forced to shoulder 60% of the load!

So give this your prompt attention. Think of increases in value to your home from rising building costs, remodeling, additions, adding new appliances or furniture. Probably this portion is not included in your present policy.

Then see us! Our companies will protect the big risk you are carrying on your own.

If your home is ablaze tonight, tomorrow will be too late to take you out of the fire insurance business.
