Mr. Jones appeared puzzled, perhaps worried, when he stepped into our office.

"My wife and I were talking last night," he said. "We wonder if there was any insurance we could get that would protect us. We have a couple of rooms we want to rent out. And the thought occurred to us that maybe one of our roomers might have an accident going up the stairs. Or, maybe trip on the sidewalk. We want insurance that would pay their medical bills—or possible damage suits—against us."

Quickly we set his mind at ease. An inexpensive liability policy was available which would give him the protection he needed. He ordered the policy right then.

Likewise, if you are worried with the legal liability which might arise from owning property—see us.

It makes no difference whether you own a farm, an apartment house, home, business building, factory or store, we can issue the proper liability coverage.

Don't be bashful.
