Across The Counter

Did you hear about these recent happenings?

A lady picked out a basket full of groceries, backed over a box, suffered severe injuries.

An elderly man was looking around in a store when an employee accidentally let a barrel slip off a hand truck. The barrel landed on his ankle, caused a painful injury and hospitalization.

A store sold an oil heater. It wasn't adjusted properly and blew up. The explosion did considerable damage to the customer's home and furniture.

Many other similar incidents could be cited. But they all add up to one thing: If you are in business, you need the protection of a good liability policy.

For most stores, a handy broad-form coverage is available. It is known as The Storekeeper's Liability Policy.

Within one convenient package a complete liability and coverage is wrapped up. It includes public liability, lease of premises, "off-premises," and property damage. For your convenience, you have only one policy and one agent involved.

Why not investigate this handy protection? Just phone 152. We'll be glad to stop and explain the features in detail.
