BAKE FISH AT BROILING TEMPERATURE

These haddock steaks are baked the new way—at broiling temperature. For extra tang and deliciousness, they're first dipped in beer and dredged in fine cracker crumbs.

This unusual method bakes the fish quickly—in ten to fifteen minutes—and keeps the flesh juicy and tender while the outside cooks crisp and golden brown. Another advantage to this new method is that the fish is practically odorless as it bakes. There's no need to turn the fish during baking. If the baking sheet is well greased, the underside will brown as well as the surface. When ready, garnish with parsley-coated lemon wedges and additional sprigs of fresh parsley, and serve with the traditional accompaniments for fish dinners—tangy beer and highly seasoned cole slaw.
