JOB NEEDS IN STATE BY 1960 ARE SHOWN BY RESEARCH STUDY

The year 1960 will see some 216,412 more experienced workers in Oregon than there were in 1950, according to a "job opportunity" study of the Northwest Research Council of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The NAM study shows the increase of workers in major job categories.

Greatest increase in Oregon will come in the "operatives" category, which includes delivery men, truck drivers, dressmakers, auto service attendants, bus drivers, taxi drivers and other related jobs. The NAM statistics show 50,500 more workers in this group by 1960, which will bring the total of operatives to 146,500.

An increase of 43,500 craftsmen by the end of this decade is also forecast by the NAM—second largest increase of any "experienced workers" category. This group includes bakers, bricklayers, carpenters, electricians, watchmakers, printers, tailors and others.

A drop in the number of private household workers by 1960 from 10,500 to 4,500 in the state is predicted.

A total experienced working force of 832,626 in the state is seen by the NAM. The survey does not include statistics on farm workers, the report states.

"On the average, an investment of $12,000 must be made to create each of these new jobs," the NAM asserts. This would mean a capital outlay of some $2,596,944,000 in Oregon.

"Relief from present stifling taxes is necessary if individuals and corporations are to be left with enough money to save and then invest in new—and expanded—Oregon business to keep pace with the state's skyrocketing population," the NAM points out.
