Boys Are Best Crop On This Farm

Good citizens in the form of healthy young men comprise the main crop raised by William "Pop" McGurk, seen above with a sampling of his pupil-assistants in "class" on the farm they operate for St. Vincent's Children's Home at Freeport, Ill.

The 160-acre farm, which supplies food for the orphanage's 250 children and 90 elderly folk at an institution for the aged, is operated by modern methods which teach the boys practical lessons in economical investment, labor-saving practices and high production.

The Holstein herd is handled in a loose-housing dairy set-up installed in two non-combustible Quonset buildings, shown in the lower picture. Working in and around them, the boys learn the importance of cleanliness, sanitation, proper feeding and milking operations, keeping production records and artificial insemination. Another Quonset functions for machinery storage and maintenance. This cuts equipment depreciation costs and provides room for instruction in machinery care.

Boys of high school age are "Pop's" farm helpers, for he believes in letting them learn by "do-how" instead of just "tell-how." They take turns on the morning shift, and those who aren't participating on athletic teams or in other activity handle the afternoon shift.

"You can bet your boots farming's worth while," Pop says, "especially when you've raised crops of boys like ours."
