Continued From Page Two smaller herds and the farm milk cow. Ruffle the animals hair as the five percent Rotoneone is dusted on the back so that the powder gets down to the skin. It will take about three ounces per cow for thorough coverage. By treating your cattle for grubs now it will insure you against the annoyance of heel flies in your herd next spring. In addition, you will be helping to do your share in conserving part of the 12,700,000 pounds of meat that are lost annually from grubs.

Last week, we stated in this column that the ACP Handbook would be in the mail this week. They are being stapled now and mailed as fast as possible. Last week we discussed the B-1 practice which provides for establishing permanent grass or grass-legume covers on mountain meadow lands. The B-2 practice is for the initial improvement of vegetative cover on range land for soil protection. The federal cost share payment provides 50% of the cost of seed not to exceed $1 per acre. The practice provides for seeding adapted perennial grasses, perennial legumes or other range forage plants necessary to provide an adequate soil protection on range land. Several grasses and legumes are adapted to this practice in Morrow county. Perhaps the most commonly seeded grass under this practice would be crested wheatgrass at the rate of six pounds per acre. On good soil in the heavier rainfalls, intermediate wheatgrass or pubescent wheatgrass could be substituted for the crested wheatgrass. The alfalfa might be left out in some cases, in which case, sheep fescue or bulbous bluegrass at the rate of two pounds per acre should be seeded as an understory grass. There are many potential areas for this range improvement in the county.

Self-Feeder Silo Designed by OSC; Cuts Costs and Labor

A low-cost, self-feeder silo is cutting out $100 a month labor for "forking" silage to 60 head of cattle at Oregon State college and can be built for as little as one-fourth the cost of upright silos with comparable capacity of 300 tons.

Designed by Joe B. Johnson, OSC animal husbandman, and L. W. Bonnicksen, agricultural engineer, the pole-frame constructed silo is simply a coered shed 70 x 21 feet, 19 feet high, and open at the ends.

Making use of the trench silo principle for easy unloading and packing, the silage is trucked in through the open ends and dumped on a concrete slab floor. It is distributed by a tractor blade to a height of eight or nine feet. This permits clearance between the top of the stack and the roof for the tractor to work back and forth in packing silage.

When the packing is completed, the tractor is driven off the stack onto a truck bed through use of loading planks and then moved to an embankment or ramp for unloading.

As the silo is filled, the open ends are blocked off with movable feed racks 21 feet long that will handle 12 animals at a time. The cattle press forward moving the rack ahead of them into the silo. Net result—the critters eat their way through the silo and nobody lifts a fork.

Johnson says there has been no silage spoilage this year at the ends or sides and only three inches on top. Next year he plans to top off the stack with hay and bedding that will be used ahead of the moving feed rack.

Prices Hit New Seasonal Highs at Hermiston Sale

HERMISTON—C. L. Warden of Boardman topped the market at the Hermiston livestock auction Friday, with a 180 lb. boar selling for $23.25 cwt. Delbert Anson, manager of the sale, reported.

Three new highs of the season were set in prices paid. A fed holstein steer weighing 1375 lbs. brought $17.10 cwt. to Bill Walker of Hermiston, and four fat hogs, weighing 785 lbs., brought $28.00 for George Montgomery of Hermiston, an increase of $3.00 over the previous sale. Two mixed ewes weighing 260 lbs., consigned by Robert Weems, Stanfield, brought $8.50, up $6.50 cwt.

Volume of cattle consigned at the sale Friday, 189 head, was almost identical to that of the post-holiday sale a year ago. Anson reported. This compared with 408 cattle at the pre-Christmas sale Dec. 18. Also consigned were 48 hogs, compared with 116, and 201 sheep at the semiweekly sheep sale, compared with 65. The decline in volume, combined with a broad and active demand, Another advantage of the silo is that it can be adapted for other uses. Poles used are pressure treated and should last for 35 to 50 years. Bonnicksen and Johnson are making further improvements by building a lean-to on each side of the silo. These can be used for loafing and feeding or other uses.

accounted for substantially higher prices on almost all animals. Increases included canner-cutter, up 60c cwt.; Utility, up $1.68 cwt.; and veal, up $3.25. All hogs were generally higher, with feeder pigs up $3.50, to a top of $29.25.

Fat cattle were in strong demand but short supply, and fat lambs, also in demand, were lacking. Grain fed cattle and steer calves are also in demand. While packers predominated at the sale, feeders were also well represented among the Oregon, Washington and Idaho buyers. Quality of animals consigned was generally lower, no cattle grading higher than utility and stock cows dropped from $133 to $115 per head as a result.

One consigner is expected to sell 400 to 500 bred ewes in dispersing his flock at the sale next Friday.

1954 FARM PRICES EXPECTED TO STRENGTHEN, SAY OSC EXPERTS

Some strengthening of farm prices may come in 1954. The general business situation holds the key, says Dr. G. B. Wood, head of the department of agricultural economics at Oregon State college.

Wood a member of President Eisenhower's national advisory agricultural commission, explains that farm and business prosperity tend to parallel each other. When business or consumer incomes are high, people buy more food and are willing to pay higher prices for it.

Farm income is expected to continue below the levels of recent years, although Wood believes the price-cost squeeze, active since 1951, may ease a little during the coming months.

Farmers are producing more than can be sold at "high" prices, explains the economist. Possibilities of expanding markets are hopeful but not too promising in the short run. If the farm plant is to produce to capacity, says Wood, farmers will face lower prices than in recent years and lower net income. Higher marketing costs and shrinking exports will be important influences.

Both price cuts as well as curtailed production are likely in the year ahead. Government Price and marketing assistance may take on new "appeal," the economist indicates.

Production costs should be down a little and with reasonable weather conditions, Wood expects Oregon farmers to have about as much money to spend in 1954 as during 1953.

M. D. Thomas, OSC extension agricultural economist, explains Oregon farm incomes hinge on prices and production. Prices for most products depend on national and world—not Oregon—supply and demand. Oregon production depends mostly on weather and growers' responses to market condition, but planting restrictions will be of new importance in 1954.

Knowledge of domestic and foreign demand, government buying, marketing and production costs, and confidence will help maintain farm income and keep financing sound, says Thomas.

INSTRUCTION CLASSES SET
