STATE WANTS SPECIALISTS

The state needs psychiatric aides, at $2376 to $2668 a year; drivers license examiners at $3000 to $3396; weight masters at $3000 to $4032.

Application forms may be obtained from the State Civil Service Commission, Salem, or 304 State Office Building, Portland.

Some positions require residence at place of employment.

TRAVEL LESS THAN '53

Estimates by the Highway Department are that travel in the state is slightly less than it was last year.

The department's figures show there were three billion miles of travel in the first six months of this year, a decline of approximately 15 million miles from the corresponding period of 1953.

The estimates are based on gas tax revenues.

EMPLOYMENT DOWN

Employment for the month of June in the Portland-Vancouver area was down 9,600 less than in 1953, the Oregon Unemployment Compensation Commission said Friday. The June total was 238,600.

The unemployment sag was general with virtually all industries. The average manufacturing wage was $77.34 a week—$1.17 more than in June 1953.

The area includes Clark County, Washington; and Multnomah, Clackamas and Washington counties in Oregon.

CAPITAL SHORTS

Rhode Island was the only state in the union not represented in the registrations of tourists visiting the State Capitol during July.

Forest products harvested under the farm woodland assistance program of the Oregon Forestry Department returned $825,201 to owners during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1954.

The staff of the Oregon World War II bonus division has been reduced to one person—at the peak of payments there were 77 employees. . . A survey of Oregon's manufacturing potential is being made by the State Unemployment Compensation Commission.

$20 PER PUPIL

Support of legislation to make a maximum payment of $20 per pupil available to school districts offering driver training courses in high school was promised today by Secretary of State Earl T. Newbery.

"Volunteer citizen groups are seeking the passage of such legislation," Newbery said. "As a

Fly Control Circular Published by College

Sanitation and proper use of insecticides can control flies in the home and on the farm, says a circular of information released by the cooperative extension service at Oregon State college.

The publication, "Fly Control," lists several aids in sanitation. They include screening windows and doors, keeping garbage cans covered, burying or burning decaying plant and animal matter, spreading manure once a week, removing moist wet feed, and draining away all moisture.

Information is also included in the circular concerning proper application, mixtures and types of insecticides effective in fly control.

Three precautions in fly control listed are:

1. Don't apply insecticides to feed troughs, feed, water tanks, or milking equipment.
2. Don't use residual fly sprays long-time and firm believer in the value of high school training, I am pleased to put the facilities of my office at the disposal of these people."

Since 1949, the drivers license division of Newbery's office has kept a box score on a selective group of 10,123 drivers—with startling results.

From 49 school districts, Newbery's office selected the names of 5,842 drivers who took driver training in high school, and of 4,281 drivers who did not get the training.

In the four year period of the test, 22 per cent of the trained drivers have been involved in accidents, as compared to 42 per cent of the untrained. Only 11 per cent of the trained drivers have been arrested for traffic violations, while 25 per cent of the untrained appeared in court.

Newbery said he is confident that a sustained program of driver training in high school would be followed rather promptly by a marked reduction in liability insurance rates.

To pay the cost of assisting school districts that wish to participate, Newbery suggested a fifty per cent per year increase in the driver license fee, plus an annual appropriation of $250,000 from the tax levied on insurance companies doing business in Oregon. The tax is now two per cent of the premium income.

Newbery emphasized that he hoped the program would not be compulsory upon the school districts, and that it be conducted under the direction of the Department of Public Instruction.

GAS RATES INCREASED

Gas rates in western and southern Oregon cities were hiked Monday by Charles H. Heltzel, Public Utilities Commissioner.

The Portland Gas and Coke Company was authorized to increase its rates 7.89 per cent and the California-Pacific Utilities Company a 10.2 per cent increase.

on animals.
