WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"
By C. WILSON HARDER

Out in California, evidence is again being presented of old maxim that some people given an inch seek a mile.

* * *

California, like New York, has a milk control act, which fixes fresh milk prices from producer down to retailer through a milk control board. At present, milk in California is 21½c per quart.

C.W. Harder

* * *

The milk control act in California was designed to attack twin evils. One was that California law insists on high standards for fresh milk. Dairymen preferred to produce manufacturing milk, rather than meet rigid fresh milk specifications.

* * *

When enacted milk price wars by retailers using milk as a loss leader, effected dairymen's prices. Consequently fresh milk supply kept dwindling.

* * *

Therefore, a law was passed to insure adequate supplies of fresh milk by guaranteeing higher prices to market milk producers over manufacturing milk. Distributor and retailer prices are also set.

* * *

At the time there were a number of independent dairy distributors operating, but their numbers dwindled over the years.

* * *

Borden's, Arden Farms and Golden State emerged as big leaders. At one time Golden State was headed by Standard Oil executives.

* * *

Golden State recently was taken over by nationwide Foremost Dairies who also bought a strong dairy cooperative.

* * *

In the meantime, Arden Farms, headquartered in Los Angeles, with branches up and down the Pacific Coast apparently decided it was not sufficient grocery store distribution, and to gain that end, entered grocery business, buying control of Mayfair stores, a big chain operation in Southern California, which controls Andrew Williams stores, a northern California chain. Arden also bought out four big wholesale grocers.

* * *

Thus operations of big dairy combines, especially their ability to buy up whole sets of retail and wholesale grocery outlets indicates milk distribution is a profitable business. Some estimate half of California milk retail price goes to distributors.

* * *

Now California milk distributing industry asks Milk Control Board to order distributors to charge grocers 25c service fee every time milk is delivered them. This 25c is just a start toward bigger service fees, it is felt. Although board has not acted yet, no one knows how much pressure politically appointed Milk Control Board can withstand.

* * *

So there is a great deal of national interest over what happens in California milk industry, now that control of milk supply is concentrated in very few hands. Current attempt to charge grocers for selling them milk may be forerunner of a series of attempts to saddle California with one of the tightest, strongest monopoly systems that Western civilization has ever encountered. Some interests with monopoly intentions are attempting to use this as excuse for junking entire milk control law. If this should happen it is felt that out of the resulting chaos, one, or at the most two, dairies, would then gain control of the entire state milk industry.

OSC Expands Student Scholarship Program

OREGON STATE COLLEGE—An expanded scholarship program at Oregon State college will provide financial aid for more than 300 deserving students this year.

The scholarships are sponsored by individuals and families interested in the institution, local and state businesses and groups and student organizations.

State system of higher education scholarships, which cover tuition and partial fees, have been granted 116 students. More than half went to incoming freshmen who graduated last spring from Oregon high schools. The number of scholarships is based on 2 percent of last year's enrollment.

Addition of the full four-year campus program for elementary teachers has brought 14 new scholarships from Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers. They cover all fees and tuition and are renewable if the student is found worthy.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam McGough and family of Walla Walla, former Heppner residents, were weekend visitors here.
