The Mustangs' first game of the 1954 grid season last Thursday turned out to be their first loss also as Pilot Rock took advantage of some crucial fumbles and a pass interception to roll over Heppner 20 to 0.

It was anybody's game the first three quarters with both teams never getting past the 30 yard line in either direction, but Heppner fumbled a punt reception in the last of the third quarter and Pilot Rock lost no time in capitalizing on the break as Lennis Hogeland smashed over on an off-tackle play from 20 yards out to score for the Rockets. He also put the ball through the uprights to put the score 7 to 0 at the end of the third go-round.

Again in the fourth period Heppner fumbled a pitchout and Pilot Rock dropped on the ball and started a 40 yard touchdown arch. Big Ladd McGowan took a quick handoff and drove over in to paydirt again for the Rockets.

After that power demonstration by Pilot Rock Heppner showed signs of running out of gas, but with co-captains Ralph Marlatt and Lyle Jensen stirring them up, the Mustangs started a desperation aerial attack which ended suddenly when McGowan hauled down a Mustang pass in front of the grandstand and galloped

No Federal Money Now Available For Hells Canyon Dam, Says Sen. Cordon

"The National Hells Canyon Association is just 4 years late," Senator Guy Cordon told a Morrow county audience here last Thursday night.

Speaking to some 75 persons in the court house, Senator Cordon explained how he introduced an amendment in the spring of 1950 to authorize construction of the Hells Canyon dam.

"That was the time when they should have had a Hells Canyon Association," he said. The senator told how his amendment was killed on a motion of Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico "with every left-winger in the senate except one voting to kill it; Senator Morse—to his credit—voted with his colleagues at that time."

Senator Cordon said, "after that, on two different occasions they tried to get a Hells Canyon authorization in the house... and failed. I tried to get that dam when we had a chance to get it. We could have done it; we should have done it. It does not make any difference to me who builds the dam. I want it built. I just don't see how you could get the federal money for it today; it'd never get through the house. But I'd vote again for the building of Hells Canyon by the Bureau of Reclamation."

Taking a suggestion from his wife, who accompanied him on this leg of the campaign tour, Senator Cordon built an "off-the-cuff" speech around suggestions asked earlier by his audience. He explained how a special title in the farm act passed by the 83rd congress provides incentive payments to increase the production of wool to a hoped-for 300 million pounds annually.

Answering the question "Why are we getting so much lumber from Canada?"—Senator Cordon drew laughter from his audience when he said, "That's simple. It's because the price of lumber in the United States is higher than that for lumber from Canada."

The senator then took a serious vein and said, "Why that I cannot say. There are people in the State department whose thinking I cannot understand. But as far as I'm concerned, I protect the products in this country." Senator Cordon went on to explain that he favors reciprocal trade agreements, and "tariffs were necessary" to protect home industries and their jobs.

To a question about the preference clause giving electricity to public utilities, Senator Cordon said, "I have no objection to it whatever; I've supported it and will again." He went on to explain how Bonneville administrators have interpreted the law "precisely opposite" to the way it reads. The law specified that until 1942 one-half of all power from Bonneville be held for public bodies. "But the Bonneville Administration interpreted it precisely the opposite," the senator said. "They ordered that all the power was to be held for public bodies all the time."

Senator Cordon then went on to explain how this ruling by past administrations has worked against Oregon where 85 percent of all power users are served by private utilities.

"Twice this state has voted on the question of state public power and turned it down," he said. "I believe in majority rule. Any time the majority wants public power, I'm for it. It's up to the people to say. My critics seem to believe in minority rule."

Oregon's senior senator closed his speech by stating his views on universal military training. "We're going to have to have trained soldiers on our right hand in these times," he said. "I want to see it in the schools, close to home. I don't want to see a man on horseback arise in this country; but we need training."

Senator Cordon was introduced by J. O. Turner, Heppner attorney, former member of the Oregon legislature. The speech at the court house followed an informal dinner meeting at which there were about 35 persons in attendance.

Six New Street Lights Ordered Here

The Heppner council this week ordered installation of six additional street lights in various sections of the town to eliminate dangerous dark spots on several streets.

Four of the lights will be placed along lower Riverside street, Birch and Willow street in the extreme west end of town. An other large light was ordered for north Main street at the end of the bridge over Willow creek and also on west Willow street at the entrance of the ally between Main and Chase streets.

The group also plans to have the power company remove either one or both of the regular lights at the corner of May and Court streets in front of the court house as the recently installed large mercury vapor light in the new safety island provides ample light on the corner.
