Kite Flying Safety Rules Emphasized

Simple safety rules can increase the fun of kite flying and at the same time prevent danger to youngsters this ancient sport, according to T. M. Keenan, district manager for Pacific Power & Light company.

He urged boys and girls to observe these four rules:

1. Always fly kites in an open field or playground, well away from power lines.

2. Use only dry cord for kite line.

3. Never use wet string or metal threads for kite line. These are conductors of electricity and can bring about a serious shock from accidental contact with overhead wires.

4. If a kite should lodge in a power line, or in a tree near the power wires, leave it there. Don't try to take it down. Skilled power linemen never take chances with live wires—neither should you.

"Pint-size" refineries help us keep gasoline prices low

Folks who like a bargain don't have to look any farther than the gas tanks of their cars. For despite a steady increase in quality, gasoline prices have remained low—and Standard Oil Company of California's table-top refineries are one good reason why.

They are pint-size laboratory pilot plants that enable our scientists to develop cost-cutting manufacturing methods for each new gasoline before we put it into production. With the aid of these rubber and glass forerunners of multi-million gallon refineries, we've worked with car manufacturers to perfect balanced gasolines designed to bring out more efficiency and economy from today's higher compression engines.

We've learned how to squeeze more gasoline from crude oil and we've found ways to make increasingly better gas at consistently low prices. Today's gasoline, for example, is 50% better than motor fuels of 1925, yet costs just a few pennies more.

The combination of research and competition has held gasoline prices down so effectively that they've advanced only 17% (ex-taxes) since 1925 while general living costs are up 52%. Even though our pint-size refineries make gasoline by the drop, they are one reason why Standard products give you a longer run for your money.

Standard plans ahead to serve you better
