 announced this week. Fifty Dollars a ton is the government support rate on the 1955 barley crop grading No. 2 or better in Terminal storage at Portland, Vancouver and Astoria. $34.58 to $45.02 is the range of basic loan rates in Oregon counties. Harney takes the low, Washington and Multnomah take the high. Basic rates in Portland and in each Oregon county are exactly $9.58 a ton less than last year. Rates are being lowered $8.33 to $9.17 a ton at most mid-west markets. The rate at San Francisco is $49.58, down $8.75 a ton from last year. In Morrow County, last year's loan was $52.92 which was a $1.27 per bushel. In 1955 the loan rate will be $43.43 or $1.04 per bushel. This price is 53% of old parity and 70% of modernized parity as of March 15, 1955.

The last few days of the really first spring weather that we have had sees a lot of activity in weed spraying. The fields that I have visited do not have heavy infestation of big weeds, however, there are heavy infestations of weeds that have come up only in the past two weeks. Applications that have been made just recently combined with the nice weather we are having appear to be giving excellent control. With the spring being so slow, damage to grain from spraying following cold weather should be much less than a year ago. Yields in many fields last year were cut considerably due to early spraying and some later spraying which followed cold snaps. Most damage seemed to be evident when temperatures dropped below 20°. Most damage is found where oil is being used as a carrier which reduces yield considerably if the right conditions exist. Work that has been done indicate that there are several factors that are tied up with oil spraying and that it is almost difficult to determine which conditions cause the greatest reduction in yields due to oils. Recommendations have therefore been made against using oil due to these conditions. In general, one pound of 2,4-D acid per acre is recommended especially where the more hard weeds such as Tar weed are predominate. Lighter applications generally control mustards, filarees and those easier to kill weeds where days are still and temperatures high. It takes less 2,4-D to get a good coverage and to do the job in killing weeds.

To find out how profitable and feasible it might be to add sheep to a small or medium size farm, The U. S. D. A. in cooperation with the Montana experiment station recently made some farm management studies on irrigated farms in Montana. It was found that the reason that most farmers keep a small flock of sheep, is to get some use out of idle land or to use up some surplus forage. Also farmers interviewed in the study said the farm flocks takes very little time away from other farm operations since sheep need most attention in the winter time. Researchers also found in their study that the average farm flock of say 60 ewes and 2 rams produce an annual return of $1300.00, or $21.70 per ewe. Of this amount $864.00 came from the same lamb crop, $64.00 from culling old ewes, and $374.00 from fleeces. These figures are based on a lamb crop of 72 lambs of which 60 were sold at 80 pounds weight for 18c per pound and the others kept as replacements and there were 68 fleeces in the flock studied averaging 10 pounds, which at the time of study sold for 55c a pound. Economist D. C. Myric of the Agricultural Research Administration says he thinks sheep would be equally adapted to the family farms with similar feed or land situations almost anywhere. Perhaps this is why we have noticed an increasing number of farm flocks of sheep in Morrow county.
