

Wheat Allotments Made, Referendum Planned June 25

Oregon wheat farmers are receiving their 1956 acreage allotment notices this week, reports Arnold Bodtker, administrative officer of the state agricultural stabilization and conservation committee, Portland. These allotments are farmers' share of the county, state and national totals set recently.

As required by law, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson also has proposed marketing quotas for the 1956 wheat crop. On June 25, producers will have a chance to vote in a referendum on whether they want quotas. Approval by two-thirds of those voting is necessary to put quotas into effect.

Bodtker reminds wheat farmers that regardless of the outcome of the referendum, acreage allotments will still apply. This means growers must stay within their established acreage allotments in order to be eligible for price supports.

Any wheat producer in commercial areas who will have in excess of 15 acres of wheat for harvest as grain in 1956 is eligible to vote in the referendum.

M. D. Thomas, agricultural economist at Oregon State college, points out that under present laws:

If the national vote on quotas is "yes"—price supports between 45 and 90 percent of parity will be available for those who stay within their acreage allotment. Those who harvest more than the allotted acreage would lose the right to price supports and be subject to penalties on "excess" wheat.

If the vote is "no"—price supports based on 50 percent of parity will be available to those who stay within allotments. Others would not be eligible for price supports. There would be no restrictions on marketings.

Under quotas, "excess" wheat is subject to a penalty equal to 45 percent of the parity price. Payment of penalties can be avoided or postponed by meeting certain requirements provided in the regulations.

Further information concerning allotments, quotas and the referendum is available from the county ASC and agricultural extension offices.

Sportsmanlike DRIVING

WEAR WHITE AT NIGHT

Darkness may be good for owls and bats. It's hard on pedestrians. Most pedestrian traffic deaths occur between 5 p.m. and 1 a.m., says the AAA driver training book, "Sportsmanlike Driving."

The man on foot at night, especially if he cannot drive, thinks a motorist sees him much farther than is possible. Car headlights look so bright, you feel sure you are seen.

That depends! What are you wearing? If you wear dark clothing, the driver sees you by means of only a very little reflected light.

Under the best conditions, pedestrians are almost invisible to the driver until the car is nearly on them. Rain, snow, fog, dirty windshields, or inefficient headlights make matters worse. They cut way down on a driver's visibility. It becomes mighty hard for him to see pedestrians.

Protect yourself. Wear white clothes or carry something white when you walk at night. Make sure you will be seen. White at night gives more light!
