One Man Married In Seattle Ceremony

By Echo Palmateer
Miss Joelda Joy Thompkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Thompkins of Seattle, and Pfc. Stuart B. Aldrich, son of Mrs. Monetta Aldrich of Ione were married at the Tabernacle Baptist church in Seattle June 15. Rev. Forrest E. Johnson officiated at the double ring, candle light ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white slipper satin and lace dress with illusion fingertip veil held in place with a coronet. She carried a bouquet of white roses centered by an orchid. Miss Donelda Thompkins was her sister's maid of honor and wore a pink dress. Miss Betty Frine, bridesmaid, wore a rose dress. They both carried bouquets of pink roses and sweet peas.

Clifford Aldrich was best man and Charles Aldrich was head usher, both are brothers of the groom.

The brides mother wore blue and the groom's mother wore lavender, both had white accessories and corsages of white roses. The church was decorated with white stocks and pink and white gladioli.

A reception followed in the church parlor with Miss Eva Aldrich assisting in cutting the wedding cake which was fronted by a cake representing an open Bible with a scripture verse.

The groom is stationed at an Army base in Georgia at present.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

Readers ask "Just what is U. S. foreign economic policy?"

A good question. A Washington bureaucrat would say something along this line: "U. S. foreign economic policy is integrating multitudinous multilateral ramifications toward overall containment." Others express it inelegantly as follows: "If there is a policy, it's akin to a rabid dog chasing his tail."

At last year's end ex-Budget Director Joseph Dodge C. W. Harder was ordered to set up Council on Foreign Economic Policy including Secretaries of Commerce, Treasury and Agriculture, as well as State Secretary, and world's best known Santa Claus, Harold Stassen, head of foreign give-away program.

With this last fact in mind, government import-export figures for 1954 are interesting. U. S. imported $10 billion worth of goods, exported $15 billion. This unbalance of exports over imports is what so-called experts worry about.

Yet these U. S. export figures include as normal trade all billions given away in various aid programs, including military aid.

Almost third of U. S. imports were coffee, cocoa, cane sugar. Another big import item was oil, a large part cheap Venezuela fuel oil which has supplanted U. S. coal in U. S. industries.

To offset this, and alleviate coal field unemployment, nation is shipping gifts of coal to Europe. For example, on recent day Yugoslavia was given $3,000,000 worth of coal by F.O.A. plus $3,040,000 to transport it there.

So government is proceeding on basis there is no difference between U. S. goods sold abroad, and those given away. And thus thinking prevails U. S. must restore "trade" balance by taking in as much goods as U. S. sells abroad, plus what it gives away.

This prompts wonder if entire world can produce fast enough to keep up with billions American bureaucrats can give away. Of course argument is advanced nation is making great strides by cutting communist nations off from world trade.

Yet figures show from 1950 to 1954 free world jumped sales to communist nations from $1 1/2 billion to almost $1 1/2 billion, while they in turn sold free nations goods within $10 million of that mark. Such facts undoubtedly prompted Sen. William Knowland to call for a blockade of Red China.

So question becomes "What has been accomplished in last ten years by one foreign economic policy after another, hectically conceived, and clamped onto U. S.?" That is why repeatedly in polls conducted by the National Federation of Independent Business, overwhelming majority of nation's independent business have voted to stop all foreign plans, thus permit situation to clear. Obviously, no sensible analysis can be made of the potential of any kind of trade as long as free goods are thrown in.

With wisdom engendered by the hard lessons learned through trading on Main Street, these businessmen know it is impossible to daily jump into a new fire sale and know where you are heading. Some feel it unfortunate that instead of appearing at every rural railroad crossing, Pennsylvania and Constitution Avenues are not lined with familiar X shaped sign inscribed "Stop, Look and Listen."
