ROSY SAYS: America lost a great American this week in the death of Harry Duval. I had known Harry Duval for a number of years and counted him as one of my close friends. What a wonderful country this would be if we had more men like him. He believed in the American way of life. He loved his community and country. He knew what it means to keep America strong with opportunity for the common man to improve himself and his community. While he is gone, the things he believed in and stood for will live for ever.
