WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS" BY C. WILSON HARDER

Some readers inquire "What will be effect of GAW, or Guaranteed Annual Wage principle negotiated by Walter Reuther?"

It would take, indeed, a crystal ball to predict eventual outcome of this arrangement. As long as cars sales hold up, thus maintaining production, there is obviously no great problem. True test will come when and if market slumps.

Obviously, if condition is reached whereby auto workers will be paid for many months for doing nothing, it is quite certain general economic conditions will also be down.

In a falling market, it is classic procedure to stimulate business by offering greater values than enjoyed in boom times.

But question arises as to just how this can be accomplished in automobile industry under terms of this contract. Assume a fall of sales requires cutting back production fifty per cent with like reduction in work force.

Fifty per cent of the work force remaining will still cost the industry the same amount of money per wage hour for building up guaranteed wage fund as when full employment existed. Thus, auto industry could be faced with choice of operating at a loss, or keep running at full capacity until a big inventory is built up, then closing down completely, escaping any wage or welfare payments.

But in such an event, because many other industries depend on auto business, a severe depression could result. So it is not National Federation of Independent Business.

COON COMMENTS

Continued from Page 2 11% higher than 1954, which until now has been the record breaking year. This certainly indicates that 1955 will be a year of record prosperity for the American worker.

THE HOOVER COMMISSION, in its report on government-owned hydro-electric projects, recommended that all power from these government-owned plants be sold at the same rate as that sold by the private utilities. This recommendation was made in order to do away with inequities which arise out of a situation, where the taxpayers of the whole country, all 48 states, support a project which benefits only the residents of the area served by this project.

YOU UNDERSTAND, of course, that this is what the Hoover Commission recommended to the President. It got a lot of publicity, popularly in our part of the country. We would be one of the affected areas if this recommendation were followed, and you may be certain that I, along with all of your representatives, will fight against any such plan being carried out. But there it is, it has been recommended. This same theme is being stressed by Congressmen in speeches on the floor of the House of Representatives almost daily. This has been going on for the last two months, and the public press is carrying editorial after editorial, hammering away at very much the same thought. That is, that the hundreds of millions of dollars which it will cost to develop our natural resources, must be raised locally, either by municipalities, public utility districts, private utility companies, etc.

WITH THE John Day bill we have met this challenge. Under this legislation, H. R. 5789, and don't let anyone tell you different, every penny used for the construction of the power generating facilities will be raised locally, this amounts to about ninety percent of the entire cost. As I pointed out in my last newsletter, not only is it true that we are going to raise the money to build this dam but, the project, will create jobs for thousands, and will thereby bring an influx of prosperity,—prosperity provided by our own efforts.

acre continued to increase production, but yield increases became smaller with each additional 50 pounds of nitrogen over 80 pounds. Either late fall or early spring applications by surface broadcasting were satisfactory.

In combination with certain management practices, phosphorus increased both the quality and quantity of hay produced on some wild flood hay meadows.

The researcher found that phosphorus gave a striking increase in the growth of annual white-tip clover, commonly found growing on eastern Oregon meadowlands. Without fertilization, this clover seldom exceeds 8 inches in height. When phosphorus was applied, it reached a height of 30 inches.

The agronomist is recommending phosphorus applications only on acres where white-tip clover is present. Applying between 40 to 60 pounds per acre annually has boosted yields from 1 to 3 tons per acre, and has increased crude protein content from 6 1/2 to 12 1/2 per cent. As the amount of clover in the forage increases, it may become practical to use higher applications.

Cooper advises delaying harvest until the lower seed heads begin to shatter. In the process of raking, most of the seed will be threshed and scattered over the meadows.

More detailed information about the experiments is presented in a new station bulletin, "More Mountain Meadow Hay with Fertilizer." Copies are available from county extension offices and Oregon State college.
