Larger Meat Supply On Livestock Market Predicted by College

An expected near record national pig crop will be putting livestock markets under pressure most of the time during the rest of the year, say agricultural economists at Oregon State college.

Even so, in Oregon returns from meat animals should compare favorably with other farm enterprises.

Prices of slaughter cattle, sheep and hogs will probably be lower than the same months of 1954, point out the economists. And, the rise in consumer incomes is not likely to compensate fully for the effects of larger meat supplies.

However, current strong bidding by farmers for feeder animals point toward prices of feeder stock holding up better than fat animal prices. This surge for feeder animals is due to two things, explain the economists. One, returns from cattle and lamb feedings during the past year were fairly satisfactory. And, two supplies of feed grains are large and prices are expected to be lower.

Beef and lamb marketings during the remainder of 1955 are expected to total about the same as last summer and fall.

Despite prospects for more pork and much beef, large grain supplies in the Northwest put Oregon farmers in a better position to compete with other livestock areas than in the past, say the economists.

Farmers should remember that there will be daily, weekly, and monthly price fluctuations depending on short-term changes in supply-demand conditions and prospects, conclude the economists. With markets under pressure most of the time, this means close attention to market information and careful timing of buying, selling, and breeding will be more important than usual if best returns are to be realized for livestock.

State Highway Deaths Lower Than 1954

A total of 62 persons lost their lives during May and June of this year indicating what is possibly going to be the amount of slaughter during July and August. This month and next will see more vacationists on the roads and highways of the state than probably ever before. Without care, the drivers of the state will easily make the totals for July and August higher than 62.

So far this year, the state has had 15 fewer deaths on the highways than for 1954, but the next few months are expected to be extremely dangerous. Summer months are proving to be the more hazardous rather than winter for high fatality rates.

There are several factors that contribute to accidents so often that they have become leading reasons for accidents and among these in speed.

The "Slow Down and Live" campaign that is endorsed by Governor Patterson and Secretary of State Earl T. Newby is directed at the driver who darts in and out of lane, passes on curves and hills just to save a few seconds; the driver who is in such a hurry to get "there" that he forgets he may not make it back.

The "Slow Down and Live" slogan is one that if heeded by all motorists, will surely keep accident rates down and death totals low for the rest of the summer.

Livestock Sale Planned August 11 By Oregon State

More than 100 registered animals will be offered at the third annual Oregon State college livestock sale August 11.

Dr. Fred F. McKenzie, head of the OSC department of animal husbandry, says buyers may choose from a list of Hereford bulls and cows; Angus bulls, cows and heifers; Romney rams and ewes; Southdown rams and ewes; Suffolk rams, Hampshire rams; and Berkshire gilts.

All bulls to be sold have above average rate-of-gain, feed efficiency and are very satisfactory in type. During a testing period when the animals were from 500 to 800 pounds in weight, the Herefords gained an average of 2.67 pounds per day and the Angus 2.55 pounds per day. Growing ration consisted of two-thirds roughage and one-third concentrates.

The cattle to be sold are part of the OSC production testing program. Complete rate-of-gain and feed efficiency information is available on each animal—an accurate guide to its quality, McKenzie pointed out.

Because of a shift in the college's breeding research program, the OSC Romney and Southdown flocks will be dispersed—except for part of the 1955 lamb drop—during the auction sale. Both of these flocks are the result of many years of careful breeding and selection.

Normal increase in the livestock used for teaching and research makes a yearly reduction sale necessary.

All animals sold are guaranteed to be breeders if properly cared for. Any bull that settles at least one-third of the healthy cows he breeds will be considered a breeder.

The sale will be held in the OSC livestock pavilion, starting at 1 p. m. Terms and conditions are the same as those of other auction livestock production sales. Copies of the sale catalog are available from the OSC animal husbandry department. Mail bids should be sent to Dr. McKenzie.
