Keeling to Head Hunt Safety Program

Local efforts to make future hunting seasons safer, fire-free and easier on both hunters and landowners, will be coordinated by Kenneth H. Keeling, Heppner, whose appointment as Morrow county chairman of Oregon's Red Hat Day campaign was announced today by Governor Paul Patterson.

More than a score of state-wide organizations are listed as sponsors of Red Hat Day, which has been set for September 23. They include sportsman, labor, stockman, agricultural, timber industry and governmental groups concerned with hunting and hunter conduct.

In announcing the appointment, Governor Patterson revealed that hunting season reports of vandalism, firearms accidents, fires and game law violations have increased.

"Perhaps only one in a thousand hunters is to blame for these reports of poor sportsmanship," Patterson said, "but unless we can reach him through the Red Hat Day program, he is jeopardizing the hunting future for all of us."

The state-wide educational campaign is directed by the Governor's Red Hat Day Committee, composed of five representatives of sponsor groups. Plans call for a month-long campaign in the press and through other information media to call attention to the sportsman's outdoor obligations.

"Native Timothy and Bluegrass reproduce themselves in the higher canyon meadows."
