The first grade has started on some new books. "The children are delighted with them," said Mrs. Jip Sumner, their teacher, and they feel that they are a complete success. The students are also learning some finger plays and have been acting out several stories.

The Davy Crockett fad has not died down yet, and the first grade has been making free hand drawing of their idea of Davy.

Kit and David George left Monday morning for a two week trip to Los Angeles. Accompanied by their parents and Barbara Warren, a high school senior, they plan to visit a movie studio and stop at Disneyland before returning home.

Traffic Accidents Greater at Night

More than half of Oregon's fatal traffic accidents take place at night when there are considerably fewer cars on the road than in daylight, analysis of reports submitted to the Secretary of State's office reveal.

Of the 359 fatal smash-ups reported last year, 188 were listed as taking place during hours of darkness and 79 of the 152 fatalities reported in the first half of 1955 happened after dark.

A basic reason for this paradox is the driver's disregard of the obvious fact that darkness hides danger, Secretary of State Earl T. Newby suggests.

"Some drivers seem to forget that at night a stalled car, a pedestrian in the roadway or any other object can't possibly be seen until it comes within headlight range," Newby said. "Then the hazard seems to loom up out of nowhere."

He said the weapons against such night dangers are equally obvious.

"They're a pair of good headlights, a speed that won't outrace those lights and a constant attitude of alertness."

Longer hours of darkness and stormy weather which reduces visibility even further will face all drivers and pedestrians in the months ahead, the secretary reminded. Through August, Oregon traffic deaths numbered 251 as compared with 247 at the same time a year ago.

New Low-Sugar Pectin Slated For OSC Tests

A new low-sugar pectin is slated for testing at Oregon State college to see if it can be used in the manufacture of frozen fruit toppings or spreads, reports Harold Schultz, head of the OSC food technology department.

Oregon fruits—frozen strawberries, raspberries, blackberries and pie-type cherries—will be used in the experiments made possible by a $4000 grant from the Mutual Citrus Products company of California.

Major research objectives are to produce an economical topping without sacrificing fruit flavor and to achieve the right consistency so the mixture isn't too thick or too thin. Research Sato, graduate assistant, under supervision of Mrs. Lois Sather, food technologist.

Such commercial spreads and toppings, the researchers report, might offer an outlet for over-ripe berries and holdover stocks or surpluses of fresh market fruit. Commercial fruit freezing plants might also re-manufacture frozen fruits into spreads and toppings and thus lengthen the working season for plant machinery.

Uses for low-sugar pectin should be good news for jam and jelly makers. The new pectin causes jams and jellies to "set" with little or no heat. Heating fruit syrups causes losses of the volatile acids that help retain fruity flavors in jams and spreads.

The new pectin differs from regular commercial pectin in that it will enable products of lower content of sugar to actually "jell." Pectin now in common use will "set" only in products containing a minimum of 50 percent sugar. The low-sugar pec-

Everything Ready For Big PI Show October 15 to 22

All roads will lead to North Portland for Future Farmers and 4-H club members October 15-22, when the big junior fat stock show again will be a feature of the Pacific International Livestock Exposition.

More than 2000 FFA and 4-H members from all sections of the northwest will be on hand, showing steers, hogs and lambs raised and fed by the youthful exhibitors in vocational agriculture and club projects.

Besides the prestige and sense of accomplishment that comes with winning a blue ribbon at the P-I, the FFA and 4-H exhibitors also will be competing for some $11,576 in premium money, scholarships and judging contests.

The "American system" of judging will be used in the junior show, replacing the "Danish system" in use for the past several years.

High point of the show will be the annual auction sale October 19, when lambs, hogs and steers from the junior show will go on the block.

Junior exhibitors again will have their own show barn at the P-I, with plenty of room to display their animals. All animals in the FFA and 4-H divisions are to be in place by 6 p. m. October 14. The animals will be weighed Sunday, October 16, with show ring competition to start Monday, October 17.

Regional championships will be at stake in the annual livestock judging contests. It is predicted that approximately 500 4-H clubbers will compete Saturday, October 15. FFA livestock and dairy judging teams will vie tin will even set products containing no sugar.

October 22, the final day of the show, with more than 150 teams entered.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. George and sons Kit and David left Monday for a two weeks business and vacation trip. They will attend a theater convention in Los Angeles, California.

Chief Warrant Officer Reese Burkenbine arrived Saturday from Wertzburg, Germany for a visit of about a week with his mother, Mrs. Marlon Hayden. He will be stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Merle Burkenbine of Pilot Rock was here for some hunting over the week end.
