PONY KICKS

By Mary Stewart
The Seventh Grade has a radio station called B B S. No, it's not a real one, but Mrs. Blanche Boulden, the seventh grade teacher, says it has given the children valuable experience in speaking before a group.

The B B S, which stands for Boulden Broadcasting System, was organized so the students could talk into a microphone while giving their speeches and reports. Larry Tibbles has been acting as announcer.

Five new record players were received this week. They will be used by the grade school.

The fifth and sixth grade under the direction of Mrs. Inez Erwin entertained the grade school Wednesday and Thursday with a play on Columbus.

The play which started in the Spanish court of Queen Isabella and King Ferdinand told the life of Columbus, using a narrator, and following the poem Columbus by Joaquin Miller.

The cast included Mike Smith as Columbus, and William Cox and Diane McCurdy as the king and queen. Dorothy Hult read the poem and Ronald Knashito was the narrator.

The rest of the class took part in it as ladies-in-waiting and court jesters.

Agriculture Outlook Foresees New State Livestock Records

OREGON STATE COLLEGE—Present large grain supplies in Oregon and the nation favor production of more meat, say extension agricultural economists at Oregon State college. The year ahead is likely to see new livestock records built on top of those that are tumbling in 1955.

In their latest "Agricultural Situation and Outlook" circular, the economists point out that throughout the nation there is now plenty of grain, hay and livestock on farms to set new records in meat and milk. In Oregon, while there isn't too much hay, there is more feed grain than ever before at the lowest prices since 1943.

There are also record numbers of beef cattle in the state. Sheep and hog populations are at relatively low levels although hogs are increasing.

In Oregon, changes in supplies and prices during the past year favor feeding more grain and less hay, the economists continue. Digestible nutrients in barley at $40 to $45 a ton cost less than in alfalfa hay at $30 a ton. Cattle and sheep are able to handle much more grain than is usually fed.

The potential for livestock production in Oregon is great, believe the economists. Hogs are especially favored by the larger supplies and lower prices of barley. But, there is a need for more silage, hay, and pasture if the state's producers are to market larger amounts of grain efficiently through cattle and sheep.

The future balance between feed grain and forage in Oregon depends greatly on what happens to wheat price programs, and whether or not feed grains are permitted on diverted wheat acres.

Copies of the circular are available from county extension offices or OSC.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. George and Kit and David returned Friday from a business and vacation trip to Southern California.

"My budget's small and not enough To cover up these floors so rough And add a pretty note or two To cheer our home, I'm feeling blue." Said Mrs. Smith. "Our living room is dull and drab and full of gloom. If only we were millionaires, There'd be an end to all my cares."

But wait! There's something very new To solve her problems—and yours, too!
