County Agent's News

Continued from Page 2 from custom work done for state highway, railroad and farmers. In 1955 $1294.50 will be received from the State Highway Commission, $469 from the Union Pacific Railroad, and $445 from farmer custom spraying. This, along with the charge to the County Road Department for control of annual weeds to enable easier road maintenance, amounting to $2574 leaves a very reasonable cost Weed Control Program.

Farmers who receive the Oregon State College Quarterly, "Oregon's Agricultural Progress," will be interested in several articles in the fall 1955 issue, which was mailed this week. No doubt, the most interesting of the articles in this issue is one on the use of diverted acres, comparing barley, cattle, or leaving it idle. The information presented here was gathered by two agricultural economists a year ago. Approximately twenty Morrow county farmers had a hand in providing the information, which along with other Columbia Basin wheat farmers, provided the basis for this article. To supplement this information, agents attending an Agricultural Outlook Conference in Pendleton last week, found that comparing various levels of income, acres diverted from wheat to barley would provide 80% of the income that could be earned if it was possible to seed all land to wheat. In figuring this, the price of $1.80 per bushel on wheat and ninety-five cents per bushel on barley was used. If cattle were on the farm, increase of income would go to 82%. If the land taken out of wheat was left idle, there would be only a 53% income attained, while if the idle land was put to grass and not utilized for pasture, a 52% income compared to all wheat would result. If such idle land was put to grass and utilized by cattle, the income would raise to 68%. Cattle prices were figured at an average of fifteen cents per pound for this study. It is also interesting to note that if wheat growers had 5% of the feed grain market, and would use it in disposing of wheat, there would be no surplus. Getting back to the fall issue of the "Oregon Agricultural Progress," we think that the "Farm Outlook" and "When It Pays to Feed Cattle" articles will also be of much interest to our farmers at this time. If you are not on the mailing list for this popular periodical, drop us a card and we will request that you be put on.

Homemakers Show Display of Work

The Heppner school homemaking department is paying tribute to American Education week with a display in J. C. Penney's window. This display includes some of the garments constructed in last year's clothing classes by eighth grade, freshmen and sophomore girls. A poster also mentions the areas of homemaking taught in the Heppner school homemaking department which are management, relationship, clothing and personal grooming, foods and nutrition, livable home and child care and development and not the prevalent thought of many just cooking and sewing. Some of the references used in homemaking are included in the window. Included in the references are some on meat and meat cutting. Another poster relates the purposes of the Heppner chapter of the Future Homemakers of America. This organization is for boys and girls enrolled in homemaking or who have successfully completed one semester of homemaking. The Heppner chapter of FHA wishes to thank the people of Heppner for their excellent cooperation with their first Hobo Day last week. Far more jobs were available than girls to do the work. Another Hobo Day for next spring is being considered. Mrs. Homer Hager is the local homemaking teacher and advisor for FHA.

The Oregon State Board of Forestry, this week, mailed order blanks to this office for ordering forest trees for farms and woodlands for the shipping season, November 1955 to March 31, 1956. Trees available for eastern Oregon are Grand Fir, Chinese Arbutus, Ponderosa Pine, Austrian Pine, Lodgepole Pine, Black Le-cust, Russian Mulberry, Russian Olive, Caragana and Chinese Elm. The evergreens cost twelve dollars per thousand, while the broad leaves are ten dollars per thousand. The minimum total order is fifty trees or one dollar. Further information and order blanks can be secured from this office.

Have you checked and cleaned the roof gutters. Leaves, sticks, bird nests, and other debris may interfere with the normal function of the gutter. Overflowing gutters cause streaking of the house exterior and may find its way into the home or house walls producing moisture stains on the interior or premature decay.

OSC Eyes Possible Oregon Invasion Of Alfalfa Insect

Possible invasion of Oregon by a destructive pest of alfalfa that caused multi-million dollar damage in the Southwest last year is being eyed by Oregon State college scientists. Dr. Paul Ritcher, OSC entomology department head, said department staff members will be on the lookout for the spotted alfalfa aphid in cooperation with state department of agriculture officials next spring. Ritcher, who was recently named chairman of a western states regional research project to exchange information on pests of clover and alfalfa, said spread of the insect is mushrooming through the west. Alfalfa growers in Tulare county, California, alone reported $2 million damage this year.

In 1954, the insect caused an estimated damage to alfalfa of $4 million in New Mexico and $500,000 in Arizona. Last year, it made its first heavy inroads in California and reduced some Nevada alfalfa stands by 80 percent. Serious infestations have also occurred in parts of Oklahoma, Texas, Utah, Kansas and Nebraska. Ritcher says it is a threat to all alfalfa-producing regions.

The aphid is pale yellow, 1/16 to 1/8 inch long with rows of black spots on its back. The alpha aphid is oftentimes mistaken for the pea aphid, also a pest of alfalfa. The alfalfa aphid, however, is about half as long as the pea aphid which is light green and does not have spots on its body.

The aphid damages alfalfa in several ways. They suck juices from the leaves, causing them to curl, turn yellow and drop off. At the same time, they may inject a toxin that interferes with plant growth. They also secrete a sticky honeydew that interferes with harvesting and drying and reduces hay quality. Research elsewhere indicates several defenses against the aphid, Ritcher reports. They include insecticides, alfalfa varieties that may have resistance to the insect's attack, and studies of other insects and parasites that prey upon the aphid.
