3,000 Fragrances To Choose From

How would you select a perfume with appeal for 60 million women, each with a highly developed individual taste? The answer sounds impossible. All you have to do is blend the right number of scents in such a way that every woman will pick out just the favorite fragrance that suits her particular fancy.

Working in his exotic world of odors, the perfume chemist has the advantage of an instrument science has never been able to match. That instrument? His keen sense of smell. Creating a new perfume can be compared to composing a symphony. The perfumer constantly seeks new perfume notes just as the composer searches for a new chord or melody. A "moving profile" gives the new Lux perfume its light, refreshing personality. Some 37 different scents, including the odors of almost every flower have been combined in a harmony of scent, with high floral notes balanced against rich oriental tones of amber and spice.
