Her bouquet was of miniature red rose buds. The bride's veil, formerly worn by her sister was "the something old," and something blue was the traditional blue garter. Her handkerchief was once carried by her great grandmother and came over from England. A penny minted in the year of her birth was placed in her shoe by her father.

Miss Nancy Anderson, maid of honor, wore a princess style gown of moss green taffeta, and the bridesmaids, Miss Karen Prock, Heppner and Miss Judy Thompson, Pendleton wore similar gowns of spice pink taffeta. Miss Marjorie Peck sister of the bride and junior bridesmaid wore moss green taffeta.

Mrs. J. O. Turner, at the organ, played the wedding music and Miss Marilyn Munkers sang "Why Do I Love You", before the ceremony and "Wedding Prayer" at the conclusion of the service. Flowers used about the church were red roses and holly.

At the reception which followed in the church parlors, Mrs. Millard Nolan, aunt of the bride, cut the cake, assisted by Mrs. Stephen Thompson, Pendleton. Pouring at the tea table, were Mrs. Burton Peck, Lexington, grandmother of the bride and Mrs. Lawrence Palmer, Lexington, grandmother of the groom.
