ROSY SAYS: I see by my paper where the government is going to solve the surplus problem by selling surplus crops back to the farmer. Now that is a smart idea. The farmers have been helping the auto industry in buying surplus automobiles for years. You can see why they are helping out in buying automobiles when you take the wheel of the new 1956 Ford with Ball-Joint front suspension and Thunderbird power. If your neighbor seems just a little proud in driving his new Ford forgive him, because he can't help it.
