We're Still A Village

About four years ago this paper got into a little editorial wrangle with the Oregonian and author Stewart Holbrook over his calling Heppner a hamlet or a village in his just-published book "Far Corners." Some of our readers may still remember that incident which was brought to mind again a couple of weeks ago by a letter to the editor in the Oregonian by a former Heppner resident O. M. Yeager, who now lives in Castle Rock, Washington and is currently writing a history of this section of the country.

seeing Mr. Yeager's letter we dug out our copy of Mr. Holbrook's "Columbia" to see for ourselves, and sure enough, we are still classified as a village. In "Far Corner", following our exchange of views on the subject, the noted author added a footnote which assuaged our feelings somewhat when he said, "It (Heppner) does not like being referred to as a village. It is an incorporated municipality and within its borders is a building whose facade has in bold letters 'City Hall'."

It is a little late now to get a similar footnote in his book "Columbia" for it has been in the bookstores for several months (and, it is an excellent book, by the way) but we can't take this effort to our civic pride lying down. We hereby make it a matter of record that we again take exception to Mr. Holbrook's designation of Heppner as a village.

We don't want to "except" too strongly for Heppner now has been fortunate in having been mentioned in at least two of Mr. Holbrook's works and such publicity is greatly appreciated for not every "village" in Oregon has been so honored. We are sort of hoping though, that if it becomes our lot to again receive mention at some future time, maybe we can graduate to the category of "town." We're willing to work our way up gradually.

Arrangements have been completed for the annual grazing alfalfa and grass tour which will be held May 21, 22 and 23. This is the fourth annual grazing alfalfa tour. E. R. Jackman, range crop specialist, Oregon State college, and Dr. Polling, extension crop specialist, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Beltsville, Maryland, will assist with the tour. While the definite set of tour stops are not yet worked out, the range and pasture improvement committee of the Morrow County Livestock Growers Association will have this completed so that we can list the stops in next week's column. This year tours will be held somewhat different than in the past, covering a comparable rainfall area each day. Established seedings, as well as those put in this spring are looking good and it now appears as though there will be a lot to see on this year's tour.

The annual spring meeting of the Morrow County Wheat Growers Association will be held at the Lexington grange hall on Tuesday evening, May 15. It is scheduled to start at 8:00 p. m. As in the past years, the active committees will report on accomplishments since the annual fall meeting. The committees and chairman are: domestic wheat utilization—Mrs. John Graves, chrm.; taxation and legislation—Mrs. Norman Nelson, chrm.; wheat disposal & market development—Kenneth Peck, chrm.; production and land use—Milton Morgan, chrm.; youth activities—D. O. Nelson, chrm.; federal agricultural programs—Max Barclay, chrm.

The feature of the evening is the "up-to-the-minute" report on farm legislation in Washington, D. C. by Floyd Root, Sherman county wheat grower and vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers. Root has spent a majority of his time in Washington D. C. since early January representing the Oregon Wheat Growers League and the National Association of Wheat Growers on farm legislation beneficial to wheat growers. It is expected that he will have a considerable amount of inside information on legislation which will be of interest to all wheat growers.

Also on the program for the evening is the announcement of the county winner of the "Conservation Man of the Year" program for Morrow county. Refresh-

The Oregon Wheat Grower's "Conservation Man of the Year" field day will be held at the ranch of the 1955 winners, Lloyd Smith and Sons near Mayville on Monday, May 28. The program will get under way at 10:00 a. m. Practices to be observed during the day are numerous and varied.

Word has just been received from the U. S. Department of Agriculture that a change in the commercial grade of slaughter cattle will be made on June 1. The commercial grade of slaughter cattle will be divided into two new grades designated as standard and commercial. The present grades for slaughter cattle are prime, choice, good, commercial, utility, cutter and canner. The new grades will be applied on the basis of maturity. Standard would be applied to younger cattle of the grade, commercial would be retained for mature cattle falling in the present commercial grade.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is planning a national country inventory of soil and water conservation needs according to a recent economics review from Oregon State College. The purpose is to help the department plan in carrying out its soil and water work more effectively. The inventory will be taken in every county in the United States and will provide basic facts about the amount and kind of soil, water and plant resources. It will also provide a basis for making a realistic estimate of treatments needed to best protect and improve these resources. Plans call for completing the inventory in three years.

Pendleton on Saturday, returning home Sunday evening.

The Monument home extension unit was well represented at the May festival in John Day. Twenty-four women were there and most of them modeled their better dresses, which were made under the leadership of the Grant county extension services.

Fine Precipitation?

That nice rain and warm weather

Will sure make things grow! Grain; hay; flowers; weeds; all Changed from week or so ago!

It's lucky that no hailstorm came

Along with all the rain! Hail never seems to be of help To fields of waving grain!

Why run the risk of a Hail loss That would really hurt? You could end up with nothing But fields of beat up dirt!
