

"I can see no good reason in our modern school setup for a three-month layoff each year," said Hon William G. Long, juvenile judge for King County, Washington, when conversing with Oregon State officials Wednesday in Salem.

An article by Judge Long recently appeared in American magazine titled, "Let's Put Our Idle Teen-Agers to Work", and was later used by Readers Digest and many other Publications. In it he pointed out that juvenile delinquency is on the increase and that most instances the offenders are youths who had a great deal of idle time on their hands.

Juvenile delinquency is almost entirely a result of a problem best expressed in the old proverb, "Idleness is the Devil's Workshop", the veteran judge said. "I strongly advise that youngsters not only should be allowed to work, but that they have a right to work. It is completely unreasonable, he said, that a youngster should have to prove that he was born in order to be able to work and an employer wants to hire him."

The laws governing child labor are out-dated, they are unduly restrictive, and in many cases they "just don't make sense," the plain-spoken jurist declared.

SHIFTING STATEAIDS
The year-old speculation over who would be appointed administrator of the State Motor Vehicle Department ended Wednesday when Governor Elmo Smith named Warner Nunn, assistant public utilities commissioner to head the extensive and rapidly growing division of state.

The administration of motor vehicles was taken from the Secretary of State by the 1955 legislature which set up a new department under the jurisdiction of the governor.

The new appointee will take over the department July 1. Nunn has been in state service for 10 years altho he is only 35 years old. In 1945, immediately following his discharge from three years in the army, he became personnel technician for the civil service commission. In 1952 he became assistant public utilities commissioner.

Nunn is a graduate of Salem public schools and Willamette University. Following his graduation he was supervisor for the farm security administration for a year before entering the army.

Thursday Public Utilities Commissioner Charles H. Hetzel appointed F. Gordon Shattuck as his assistant to replace Nunn. Shattuck, 46, has been with the Oregon State Unemployment Service and the Unemployment Commission since 1940. He attended Portland schools and Oregon State and served two years with the Air Force during World War II.

GAY BLUEBIRDS
The Gay Bluebirds entertained with a tea Saturday afternoon May 12 in honor of their mothers. The tea was held at the home of Mrs. Marvin Smith who assisted the leader, Mrs. Marion Huggett.

Games were played and each girl had a gift to give her mother. Then Mrs. Huggett was given a surprise shower by the girls and their mothers.

A regular business meeting was conducted so that the Mothers could see how the group worked and refreshments were served by the girls.

This group has a bird house that they are going to donate to the new city park as soon as a pole is available for it.

Summer Furniture Combines Indoor, Outdoor Features

If you like to live outside in the summertime, you'll welcome new outdoor furniture fashions being featured in Oregon stores.

Furnishings for "leisure living" are arriving daily and more will be shown in weeks to come, according to Myrtle Carter home furnishings specialist at Oregon State college.

Manufacturers are concentrating on two-purpose furniture that can be used inside the house during colder months and then carried outdoors for summer use. Mrs. Carter says. Many new pieces for rustproof, sun-resistant and waterproof. Emphasis is on lightweight metal skeleton frames, that fold for easy carrying.

Metal, rattan, cane, plastics and bamboo are popular materials. Wrought iron carts used for plants inside go outdoors as cold drink stands.

Chairs and chaise lounges come with aluminum frames. Removable foam rubber liners covered with plastic are left unscathed by dampness and temperature changes.

Metal colors run rampant. Aluminum comes in natural, golden, and copper finish. Rust-proof bronze furniture blends beautifully with new upholstery colors, the specialist points out. Pink metal combined with saran webbing in several color patterns is being marketed. Saran, a seat-cover standby for several years, is flame resistant, sag-proof, easily cleaned and defies sun, rain and mildew.

Picnic tables, benches and chairs are made from redwood. They're solid, rugged and heavy and can stay outdoors all year round.

The trend is toward correlated groups—chairs, sofas, tables—that go well together. Simple, sleek lines are easiest to fit into room schemes, says Mrs. Carter.

A memo to the shopper on a budget: choose uncluttered looking pieces in subtle colors. They'll look handsome longer and blend better with temporary furnishing.

OSC Devises System For Removing Dents In Irrigation Pipe

A safe, simple method of restoring kinked or dented aluminum irrigation pipe has been devised at Oregon State college. It could save Oregon's growing number of sprinkler-irrigation farmers thousands of dollars annually in salvaged pipe and reduced labor costs.

The pipe-straightening technique, developed by Dale Kirk, agricultural engineer, uses water pressure to "inflate" the pipe to original shape. A low-cost hydraulic hand pump and a set of special pressure plugs to seal pipe ends do the trick. Restored pipe has 95 percent of its original strength at the damaged area.

Common but costly methods now used to restore pipe include hammering out dents or cutting out damaged sections and recoupling the shortened pipe. Malleting out dents leaves the tubing rough. These rough spots like dents, reduce water pressure through friction.

Kirk's water-pressure method is not only easy but safe—if pipe breaks under the water treatment, it simple spurts water. The special sealing plugs take pressure up to 1500 pounds per square inch, 75 percent of the pressure aluminum pipe can stand.

As a guard against pipe-rupturing, Kirk says dented pipe must have no cuts, tears, sharp crimps or otherwise weakened areas. Restored pipe is likely to bend easier at the point of damage than new pipe if picked up suddenly at one end while it is full of water, he cautions.

The researcher estimates the special plugs would cost about $100 a pair—probably too much for the average irrigation farmer. But he thinks it is practical for someone to offer this service on a custom basis. The OSC agricultural engineering department now has plans available for 3-inch pipe plugs.
