Ed Kuhn's garage was damaged by heat and fire on Wednesday afternoon of last week due to an explosion from a gasoline tank on a car on which he was welding a trailer hitch. Kuhn states the arc accidentally came in contact with the tank burning a hole which started the fire and explosion. He was burned about the face and hands, but not seriously. He was treated by a physician. The building, an aluminum structure, was damaged especially on the roof. Walter Hayes, local grocer, arrived in time with the city fire truck to prevent complete destruction of the building. The car was badly damaged. Kuhn estimated the damage to the building at about $750.

All Animals Are Black or White At Klamath Country's B&W Ranch

Lava Monument, Logging Museum Part of Loop Trip

The following is a condensation of a motorlog appearing in the May 27 issue of The Sunday Oregonian's Northwest rotogravure magazine. It is one of an annual series sponsored jointly by The Oregonian and the Oregon State Motor association.

BY LEVERETT RICHARDS Staff Writer, The Oregonian

I just discovered a new country. It's called Klamath Falls. Of course, there aren't any falls. But there are plenty of Klamaths. The woods are full of them.

Lots of things you can get in Klamath Falls you can't get anywhere else—including a hot foot. It's the only town in the country where you can get a hotfoot with your shoes off in the middle of Esplanade street in the middle of January. Whole country's about ready to come to a boil. All you got to do is drill a well and tap the devil's hot water tank.

It isn't only the streets they heat, with natural hot water, but their homes, about 400 of them, and a couple dozen business buildings.

But when it comes to oddities, don't miss the B&W (Black and White) ranch, southeast on highway 70 from Klamath Falls to Oleno, thence southeast on Poe valley road. Better check with the Klamath Falls chamber of commerce for directions.

Even Blinds Are Black

There's no sign on the ranch. It's a private home, but a Zoo's Who of all that's Black and White.

All buildings are white as angel feathers—with black roofs, black trim, even black-trimmed Venetian blinds. Melvin Feigl, the owner, drives a black and white Olds. Mrs. Feigl's poodle is black.

Carolyn, 12, raises white and black rabbits and white Japanese silky chickens. Brother Lee rides a genuine all-white (but not albino) llama, one of the few in existence. What's even rarer, Jack the llama is as gentle as dog. He had a mate (named Jill, naturally), who was so ornery Feigl sold her. Never been able to find another white one.

Jack has an almost-black emu for a mate. (An emu is an ostracized ostrich and most difficult to interview).

In another pen is an animal we might as well skip. You won't believe it anyway. Called a wallaroo.

It looks like a jet-propelled rocking chair with hair, black of course. This wallaroo snorts and bounds around like a bebop fan, really gone.

In a pasture adjoining the

house is a herd of rare white wapiti (elk to us common people), prize of the B&W. Chet Barton, founder of the ranch, who "just liked black and white," bought up the last of the white elk and saved them from extinction. Losses, and sales to other collectors depleted the herd down to two.

Feigl, who took over the ranch upon Barton's death, bought six more from California this winter and brought them up in co-operation with Jack Marks, superintendent of Portland's zoo.

Five white English fallow deer, a Mouflon sheep from Italy, six albino palomino riding horses, and a herd of 160 Black Angus cattle also roam his 475-acre ranch, behind white fences.

The B&W ranch has one beast which is both black and white. Name is Petunia. Guess what!

Visitors are welcome to see this unique private zoo from the road or to enter the front gate and view the animals from the spacious front lawn, without charge. But the Feigl's work for a living. They can seldom take time to visit.

There's lot to see and do out of K. Falls—the Klamath lake bird refuge, road house and nursery for millions of ducks and geese; the Tule lake wild life refuge, the Lava Beds national monument, and others.

Best way to sample them all and get the flavor of this seat of ancient Indian and prehistoric Indian culture is to check the brand new Klamath county museum run by Dr. Claude E. Schaeffer. There's nothing dead about this showcase except the stuffed pelican in the showcase.

Then don't miss the Modocs. They're still there, in spirit, if not in fact, lurking behind the devil's own fortress in the lava beds south of Klamath Falls, where they fought—and whipped—the United States army of 1872 with all its pomp and power.

Some of the nicest people you meet here around Klamath Falls are pelicans—a B-29 with a beak that can hold more than its bellycan.

These birds own Klamath lake, which just happens to be the biggest body of water in the west—40 miles long and 8 miles wide.

Collier state park logging museum, 33 miles north of K. Falls, is full of fascinating old wooden-wheeled oxcarts and steam engines used in Oregon's own woods.

To see the sights, plan at least three days for motorlog.

home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Don Tannehill.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Coats went to Hardman Sunday to visit Coats' brother, Jess Coats.

Mrs. Esther Knight and daughter Edna, Portland, are visiting her father, Charles Nickerson, this week. Another visitor is Nickerson's brother-in-law, John Beddes, Boise, Idaho.

Shirley Earwood accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Califf of Hermiston to Estacada Sunday to visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Califf. She will remain there two weeks.

Bob Thornhill is a patient in Good Shepherd hospital in Hermiston where he had surgery last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cook, Bellingham, Wash., visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Carpenter last Friday on their way home from Detroit, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvie Mefford, Yakima, Wash., visited at the home of Mefford's sister, Mrs. Florence Root, from Friday till Monday. Sunday visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Al Macomber, Arlington, brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Root.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wiese and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Allen spent the weekend in Seattle, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. Nate Macomber went to Grandview, Wash. Sunday to visit Macomber's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Macomber.

Sgt. Robert Cagle has returned from a 30 day leave at his home in Metropolis, Ill. Ed Kille, father of Mrs. Frank Parmer, accompanied him back here to visit.

Mrs. Freda Thayer left Friday for her home at Lyons for the summer. Donnie Aardappel went with her and will spend the summer there.
