Lexington News

Holly Rebekah lodge held their regular meeting on Thursday evening. At this time the state president, Mrs. Ethel Gibbs and Bernice Thompson, assembly conductor, paid an official visit. Also present for this meeting was past president Lola Osburne of Portland who was a week's guest of Mrs. and Mr. Claude White of Hardman, who accompanied her here. The president held a most beneficial meeting in the afternoon, and the evening was spent as a social affair with the lodge given the opportunity to see the most interesting pictures, of the I. O. O. F. home in Portland and the very interesting fleet of flowers which is held on Memorial Day at Depoe Bay. This is a nationally known event at which time sprays are thrown to the open sea, honoring the ones of the armed services who have lost their lives at sea. One of the ships pictured carried the Odd-fellows and Rebekah sprays which were most beautiful and had an important place in the parade to sea. Later refreshments were served by Mrs. Em Peck, Mrs. Gladys Van Winkle, and Mrs. Eldon Padberg.

Asa Way from Hillsboro was a visitor in Lexington over the weekend.

Mrs. Clarence Hayes and her daughters are visiting at her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Warner.

Soil Bank Program To Be Talked at Moro Field Day

The national Soil Bank and a livestock wheat-feeding program to expand grain markets will be featured topics at the annual field day of the Sherman Branch experiment station, Moro, July 10.

The program is scheduled to start at 10:30 a. m. followed with a "buck-a-plate" noon lunch on the experiment station lawn, reports William Hall, superintendent. Family attendance is being encouraged with a special program for women and arrangements with Junior 4-H leaders to assist in entertaining children throughout the day.

Featured speaker will be Dr. G. Burton Wood, head of Oregon State college agricultural economics department, who will discuss the soil bank program and its possible effects on agricultural economy. Dr. Wood is a member of the advisory committee to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson.

James Hill, Jr. of the Federated Livestock corporation, Pendleton, will explain the corporation's program of expanding grain markets through feeding livestock and will tell how farmers can participate in the program.

A special program for women is under supervision of Mrs. Ina Hansen, Sherman county home extension agent. Included in the program will be a talk and demonstration on baking hot breads and rolls by Miss Naida Whybark, home economist for the Oregon Wheat Growers League.

The afternoon tour of the experiment station will give visitors a chance to compare wheat stands from various nitrogen fertilizer treatments such as sources of nitrogen, rates and dates of application, and spacing of applicator shanks. Comparisons between different dates and rates of seeding wheat and safflower will also be on display.

FAIR-MINDED

There is always a crowd where the Juniors are and this is especially true of the 4-H and FFA exhibitors. They learn to do by doing and their finished products show they have learned their lessons well. It is possible, you too, might learn from their exhibits too.
