New White Winter Wheat Named Burt

The Pacific (Northwest's new bread-type, smut-resistant hard white winter wheat has been named Burt, according to F. E. Price, director of the Oregon State college agricultural experiment station.
 The new wheat was released August 24 by OSC and Washington State college experiment stations. Title clearance of the name, Burt, has just been received from the U. S. department of agriculture. The name was selected by Pacific Northwest wheat breeders in honor of the late Dr. Burton B. Bayles, wheat breeder and USDA wheat project administrator.
 Dr. Bayles worked hard for development of a hard white bread-type wheat and for establishment of the Western Wheat Quality laboratory, now located at Pullman. He died April 21, 1954, at Beirut, Lebanon, enroute to Damascus, Syria, to attend a food and agriculture organization conference on grain improvement in the Near East.
 The Burt variety is recommended for production in the drier rainfall areas—14 inches and under—of Oregon and Washington. It is not recommended, however, to replace the new hard red winter variety, Columbia, in 10 to 14-inch rainfall areas where the hard red variety is adapted.
 Columbia is being recommended principally in western Umatilla, northern parts of Morrow, Gilliam, and Sherman counties, and southern Wasco county.
 Both Burt and Columbia, which was released last year, are highly smut-resistant and have stiff, lodge-resistant straw. Hard, red wheats have a background of high performance for bread flour which may give Columbia a slight edge with millers, reports D. D. Hill, OSC farm crops department head.
 Columbia and Burt are both higher yielders than Rio, the established hard, red winter wheat variety which lodges badly. Burt has a bearded, common-type (long) head, and white chaff. In winter hardiness trials, Burt ranks with Elmar and Brevor, but notably below Rio.
 Milling and baking trials by the Wheat Quality laboratory show that Burt mills better than Rio and compares quite favorably in baking quality to the hard, red winter wheat varieties of the two states.
 Burt has the yield and quality to replace club wheats in the drier areas of Oregon and Washington, Price stated. There is danger of club wheats in these areas having a protein content too high for pastry flours, and club wheats lack proper characteristics for top quality bread flour. As a result, the market outlook for clubs in these areas is highly uncertain.
 In the drier areas, Burt yields as well or better than Elmar or Brevor. It can be used domestically for bread flours and has a potential export market. Japanese officials touring the Pacific Northwest in the past few weeks have expressed an interest in the new wheat. Japan is the major outlet for the region's wheat exports.

Plans are now complete for the distribution of some 8000 bushels of certified Burt seed this fall to Oregon certified seed growers, according to Hill, who is chairman of the Oregon Seed Allocation committee.

By the fall of 1957, enough seed should be available to plant most of the commercial acreage in the adapted areas of Oregon, Hill said. Seed will be distributed through special county committees appointed by OSC extension service and the Oregon Wheat Growers League.

Coffee Flavors Gel-Dessert

Sophisticated of flavor is this two-layered coffee mold. Unflavored gelatine, a little sugar and instant coffee make the clear jelly for the top layer. Whipped cream is added to the basic recipe for the bottom layer. Each taste is like sipping coffee through whipped cream.

Two-Tone Coffee Mold

Coffee Jelly:
 1 envelope unflavored gelatine 1 1/4 cups hot water
 1/2 cup cold water 1/4 cup sugar
 1 tablespoon instant coffee
 Sprinkle gelatine on cold water to soften. Add hot water; stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add sugar and coffee; stir until sugar is dissolved. Turn into a 5-cup mold; chill until almost firm.

Coffee Bavarian:
 1 envelope unflavored gelatine 1/2 cup sugar
 1/2 cup cold water 4 teaspoons instant coffee
 1/4 cup hot water 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
 Sprinkle gelatine on cold water to soften. Add hot water; stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add sugar and coffee; stir until sugar is dissolved. Chill until mixture is the consistency of unbeaten egg white. Fold in whipped cream. Turn on top of almost firm first layer. Chill until firm. Unmold; garnish with additional whipped cream.
 YIELD: 8-10 servings.
 NOTE: If desired, recipes may be used separately. Increase sugar in clear coffee jelly to 1/2 cup and turn into a 2-cup mold or 4 individual molds. Turn coffee "Bavarian" into a 3-cup mold or spoon into dessert dishes.
