WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS" By C. WILSON HARDER

As new Congress goes into session, it can perhaps be truly said, as never before, eyes of the world are on Washington.

For apparently only Congress can prevent nation from making another great public relations blunder.

In public speech Vice President has announced nation must help England financially to preserve it from economic consequences of its brutal, bloody folly in Egypt. Many feel Mr. Nixon made speech with greatest reluctance as it does not jibe with past performances.

Replacement of Herbert Hoover, Jr., by Christian Herter, a very warm British supporter in State Dept. is taken as another indication everything is being oiled to dig deep into American taxpayers' pockets so England will not lose anything from cutting off its own oil supply through maniacal action.

England has already asked to default on $81 million in interest owed on a loan from the U. S. And the Hon. Geoffrey Hirst, conservative member of British Parliament has told his people U. S. should give England $700 million to make up for "gross injustice" America has done to England.

What is that gross injustice? Merely U. S. refused to support the bloody Anglo-French sneak attack on Egypt over Suez question without further negotiations.

STATE CAR POOL PAYS OFF
The two-year-old state car pool in Salem has done so well the next move should be to start one in Portland, said Robert R. Johnson on his last day as director of the State Department of Finance and Administration this week.

The present pool has made a profit of $49,401 on operations in the past 27 months, with the money going into the reserve fund. The profit was shown, despite a reduction in charges to each state agency using the pool, from 6 cents per mile in 1954 to the current 4 1/2 cents. This is 2 1/2 cents less than the amount paid by the state for private cars used in state business.

STATE F. B. I.
Sen. Carl Francis (R) Dayton has introduced a bill that would create a state bureau of criminal identification and investigation patterned after the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

It would require all local enforcement officers to file detailed reports of crimes in their area. The agency would be under the supervision of the Governor, who would appoint a director. The criminal files of the state police also would be transferred to the new department.

TO REGULATE LOBBYISTS
Rep. Monroe Sweetland (D), Milwaukie, announced Thursday he will introduce a bill to regulate lobbyists.

It would require lobbyists to register with the chief clerks of each house, and to file reports as to their source of income, payments, and what legislation they seek to influence.

RETARDED CHILDREN
Sen. Jean Lewis (D) Portland, proposed in a bill introduced on Thursday that an interim committee study of programs for mentally retarded children be made.

1957 Hog Price Prospects Good, Economist Says
Hog price prospects look good for 1957. Farmers shouldn't count on a repeat of 1954 prices, but $20 hogs are definitely back in the picture, says M. D. Thomas, Oregon State college agricultural economist.

Oregon's favorable feed situation, good hog-raising climate, and strong pork market have combined to put Oregon swine growers in a strong competitive position this year, the economist states.

With about 10 percent of national population, the Pacific Coast raises only 1 percent of the pigs. This usually keeps Coast hog prices the highest in the nation, Thomas pointed out.

Nationally, the fall pig crop was President Eisenhower took over situation and through memos, other actions, achieved a high-water mark in high moral diplomacy by making it clear that the American people condemn unnecessary bloodshed no matter who perpetrates it.

But now an attempt will be made to negate this great example of moral objectivity by making sure England does not suffer economic loss because of its bloodshedding.

A great deterrent to modern war is realization that nobody wins. Armed victory does not prevent economic disaster.

England knew this fact.

Yet, if American people are forced to make up this British economic loss it can be truly said that England will have contrived to have had their cake, and eaten it, too.

This can furnish Kremlin with mightiest propaganda weapon it has yet had. For it could be stated that if U. S. makes up to England, France, or any other nation, the costs of their aggressions against weaker peoples, then U. S. is a silent partner in aggression.

Obviously this is contrary to spirit of American people.

But millions of peoples, misinformed only through a controlled press in other nations will not know this. They will only be told the American people financed the consequences of bloody aggressions. And as surely as it was once writ "By their deeds shall ye know them" so will America suffer one of its greatest propaganda defeats of all time in the struggle for the hearts and minds of men.

20 percent smaller than a year earlier. Spring farrowings are expected to be 2 percent smaller than last spring and 10 percent less than the spring of 1955. Adding to the optimism of fewer pig numbers is the Oregon feed situation. Another bumper barley crop is anticipated from acres diverted from wheat production under government production quotas.

The economist advises swine growers to get barrows from the coming spring pig crop to market before mid-September. He also recommends selling weaner pigs next fall or the spring of 1958 if it looks like the Midwest is coming back strong by that time.

W. Y. Fowler, OSC livestock marketing specialist, says that farmers planning to stay with hogs over the long pull, should get into the lean meaty type. A price differential of $1.50 a hundred usually exists between the meaty No. 1 hogs and the fat No. 3's, says Fowler. And research shows it takes more feed to put on a pound of fat than a pound of lean meat.

Processed Potatoes Make Market Hit; New Products Noted
Potatoes are losing their skins but not their popularity, says Oregon State college extension marketing specialists. New commercially prepared potato products are finding wide favor.

The specialists report that the quantity of fresh potatoes used in homes has dropped in the past 10 years, but that processed potato foods are rapidly filling the gap. One out of every six pounds of potatoes today is used in some processed form.

Chip bars, crushed chip candy, chipleets and potato nuts are new products being developed by U. S. department of agriculture researchers. Potato chips, a familiar market standby, now comes in special flavors, and are combed and curled into fancy shapes.

assortment of potato products that include French fries, puffs, dice, patties, potato soup, and whipped potatoes. Several forms of dehydrated potatoes, dice, granules, flakes and shreds, are on the market or in the test stage. Diced potatoes are especially popular in canned stews and hashes.

New uses have also been developed for potato starch in "instant" puddings. Canned potatoes are put into brine packs and used in hashes, stews, and salads. Potato flour, on the market since World War I, is used mainly in potato bread, donuts, and other specialty items.

Some pre-peeled potatoes have started to move into retail trade, specialists report, although most of them are distributed only through wholesale channels.

Research of fresh potatoes is being conducted by OSC home economists in cooking tests on Oregon's netted gems. Improved marketing procedures are also being investigated.

Winter months are good ones to try out new potato recipes and potato products since supplies are more plentiful and prices reasonable, the specialists suggest.

Nation's Money System is Described
What do we use for money? Where does it come from? Where does it go?

A new bulletin from the Oregon State college extension service attempts to answer these fundamental questions.

Oregon residents may obtain copies of the bulletin, "What We Use for Money", from county extension service offices or the OSC bulletin clerk.

Author of the bulletin is E. L. Potter, professor emeritus of agricultural economics, who has been on the OSC faculty for nearly 50 years. He is an authority on agricultural finance and served on the board of directors of an Oregon bank for 25 years.

The 20-page booklet offers brief, basic examination of how the money supply of the United States is increased and decreased and of how the nation's monetary system works.
