Two Range Grasses Look Good in Test At Branch Station Two range grasses that looked good in experimental trials may be useful on Eastern Oregon range lands, according to a report from the Squaw Butte-Harney branch of the Oregon State college agricultural experiment station.

Scott Cooper, agronomist, reports that in 1953 to 1956 yield trials, Siberian wheatgrass out-yielded the standard crested wheatgrass in all four years and big bluegrass topped both wheatgrasses in yield the last three years.

The big bluegrass was slower to get started, Cooper explained, but was a consistent high yielder once established. It starts growth much earlier in the spring than crested wheatgrass but is easily pulled up by livestock—a characteristic that will probably have to be corrected by plant breeders.

Yields in the trials were figured as pounds of air-dry matter, about the same as field-cured hay. Rainfall during the experiment averaged a little over 11 inches a year.

Cooper also found that tall wheatgrass was a higher yielder during wet years, but fell down on yields during dry seasons. In contrast, hard fescue ranked higher during drier years than in wetter years. Twelve grasses were tested in the trials.

ern Willamette Valley soils showed indications that magnesium applications may boost yields of cabbage, cauliflower and broccoli.

CHEESE RING Tasty Cheese Ring makes a fine main dish when teamed with a hearty ham 'n bean sauce.

Make tasteful use of leftover Easter ham by serving it with this flavorful Cheese Ring. Serve the ham in combination with lima beans in your favorite cream sauce.

The attractive ring is easy as can be to make. Put it together just as you would a batch of muffins, adding cheese to the dry ingredients. Bake it in a well-greased ring mold.

Serve Cheese Ring with piping hot creamed ham and beans and a fresh and colorful relish assortment—tomato wedges, carrot curls and green pepper strips. This is a good choice for luncheon or for a hurry-up supper.

When you bake this Cheese Ring and other muffin-type breads, too, be sure you use enriched flour. Enrichment adds thiamine, niacin, riboflavin and food iron to both your home-baked products and those you buy from the commercial baker.

CHEESE RING 2 cups sifted enriched flour 1/4 cup shredded American cheese 1 tablespoon baking powder 1 egg, beaten 1 teaspoon salt 1 cup milk 2 tablespoons sugar 2 tablespoons melted shortening Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add shredded cheese. Combine egg, milk and shortening. Add liquid to flour mixture, stirring only until flour is moistened. Spoon into greased 9-inch ring mold. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 25 minutes. Serve with creamed limas and cubed ham. Makes 1 9-inch ring.

High School Driver Training Aided Under New Measure

A bill providing state aid for high school driver education courses was signed into law Wednesday morning by Governor Robert D. Holmes. In signing the bill, Governor Holmes said he believes increased driver education for all age groups is important to improve the state's accident prevention program.

"State-aided high school driver education," he said, "is a very significant step forward in the state's long-range program to reduce accidents."

The Governor pointed out that studies have shown that young drivers who have received both classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction maintain better driving records than do untrained drivers. This fact is reflected by reduced insurance rates offered by many companies to parents whose teen-age children have had driver training.

State school superintendent Rex Putnam, superintendent of public instruction and a member of the state traffic safety commission; Marshall Dana, executive secretary of the Oregon Highway Lifesavers; Father Kevin Murphy, representing parochial schools; Charles Snell, president of the Oregon State Motor Association; Senator Jean Lewis and Representative Norman Howard.

Under provisions of the bill, money to partially defray school expenses in conducting courses will come from an additional $1 fee for each driver and chauffeur license issued in the state.

Collection of the additional $1 will begin sometime late this summer and all drivers will receive reminders notifying them of the increased cost by the Department of Motor Vehicles, according to James F. Johnson, director.

Motorists will pay $2.50 when their licenses are issued or renewed, Johnson said, but only $1.00 of this amount represents the cost of the license itself. Fifty cents goes to a fund for medical and hospital expenses of indigent traffic accident victims and the other dollar to the Department of Education which will administer the driver training program. Licenses are good for two years.

Distribution to schools offering driver training will begin in September, 1958.

January Safe Month In State Traffic January was safer than any month for the past half-year on Oregon streets and highways, the Oregon Traffic Safety Commission reported today.

The improved death record followed a national trend and, like national figures, reflected the first step in deaths since October.

The death rate for the month was 5.3 deaths per 100,000,000 miles traveled. This was nearly two full points below the December rate and compares with an 8.1 death rate scored in November.

The Commission said the death rate is based on the number of people killed in each 100,000,000 miles of travel. Mileage during the month totalled 504,087,978.

Officials said they hoped the trend would be continued and added that it would if "each driver will accept his personal responsibility for accident prevention."
