Hormone Injections Boost Beef Gains; Results Listed

Stilbestrol hormone injections to boost beef gains proved more effective than "fed" stilbestrol in trials just completed by the Oregon State college agricultural experiment station—provided animals receive enough protein to make full use of the hormone stimulus.

Feeder steers on high protein rations this winter gained 10 to 15 percent faster when pellets were implanted under the skin on the back side of the ear as compared with addition of stilbestrol to the grain ration. Both methods are used by ranchers.

Tests were conducted with Hereford steers at OSC's Mahoney branch experiment station near Ontario during the 126-day feeding period ending April 1. Neil Hoffman, station superintendent, said advantages of implants were lost when not accompanied by high protein rations.

Highest gains—3.06 pounds per day—were made by steers receiving a 30-milligram stilbestrol implant at the start of the feeding program. The basic feed ration consists of free-choice alfalfa, about 11 pounds of ground ear corn, and one-half pound of wheat bran. Added protein was about four pounds of ammoniated beet pulp, a new product measuring 20 percent protein.

Steers on the same ration, but with 10 milligrams stilbestrol daily mixed in the bran, averaged daily gains of 2.72 pounds. Cost per pound of gain from "fed" stilbestrol was 18.3 cents compared to 16.4 cents with the stilbestrol implant.

The feeding trials further showed that ammoniated beet pulp produced beef gains at less cost than standard protein supplement also rated 20 percent crude protein. Beet pulp can be treated for approximately $5 a ton. Hoffman reported, with total cost of the finished product about 20 percent less than the protein supplement consisting of regular beet pulp and cottonseed meal.

Steers implanted with stilbestrol and receiving the protein supplement averaged daily gains of 3.03 pounds at a cost of 17.5 cents per pound of gain. Animals on "fed" stilbestrol and protein supplement gained 2.69 pounds a day at a cost of 19.3 cents per pound of gain.

New Night Highway Safety Program

Congressman Kenneth A. Roberts, of Alabama, Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Highway Safety, places the first of a new type reflectorized decal on the back of a truck to launch a nation-wide trucking industry night time safety program. Many truck operators will be putting similar safety decals on their trucks in advance of the summer Slow Down and Live Safety Campaign sponsored by the governors of the forty-eight states. The night safety project, headed by Goley D. Sontheimer, (right), director of safety of the American Trucking Associations, is the first of a three-part drive of the ATA in conjunction with the governors' program to cut down highway accidents during the summer months.

Importance of high protein rations for effective use of stilbestrol implants was pinpointed when regular beet pulp was used with the basic ration of alfalfa, corn and bran. Gains dropped to 2.73 pounds a day for animals receiving stilbestrol implants but went up to 2.83 pounds for steer on "fed" stilbestrol.

Tests were conducted with 50 high-quality yearling Hereford steers from OSC's Squaw Butte Harney branch experiment station, Burns. The steers averaged about 810 pounds at the start of the feeding period. Average weight on April 1 ranged from 1153 pounds for the group on "fed" stilbestrol and protein supplement up to 1190 pounds for those receiving stilbestrol implants and ammoniated beet pulp.

Finished live grades for all animals ranged from "high good" to "choice" with the fastest gaining group consisting of two "high goods" and six "choice" or "low choice" animals.

Oregon sheepmen slated to market more than a half million fat lambs this spring and summer, mostly to out-of-state consumers, could net an extra $3 a head from lambs finished off before mid-June, say Oregon State college extension specialists.

W. Y. Fowler, livestock marketing specialist, says lamb prices are expected to hold strong, following the pace set by beef. Best prices will go to the early spring lambs, he adds, that fill the market gap between California's peak April sales and late June marketings elsewhere.

The old rule of the thumb that a 75-pound lamb on Memorial Day may be worth more than a 90-pound lamb on July 4 still holds, the specialist says. Sharp price drops normally hit here about June 15.

Fowler and John Landers, OSC livestock specialist, offer the following suggestions for boosting lambs to early markets:

Shear ewes early to keep them pasturing well and producing milk rather than "holding-up" in the shade to escape warm weather. See county extension agents for fertilizer recommendations to keep pasture producing at maximum.

Give lambs 1/2 to 3/4 pounds of grain daily, right up to loading time. Any locally-grown grain, alone or in mixture, will do. Keep plenty of fresh water and salt available.

Drench lambs immediately if they show symptoms of internal parasites — scours, inability to gain, and deadflocking wool. Drench with one ounce of commercial liquid phenothiazine. Repeat in two weeks. Keep a nine-to-one salt and phenothiazine mixture before the flock at all times.

When lambs reach 80 pounds and grade "choice", get them to market rather than waiting for the entire lamb crop to ripen. Over-ripe lambs not only go down in grade and value but require extra feed and care in the process. Neighbors can often pool transportation for small lots of market-ready lambs.

Keep earliest, heavy ewe lambs at home for flock replacements. The specialists also advise growers with old-crop lambs to move them to market within the next two weeks to avoid price loss in competition with the 1957 crop.
