Shish Kebab Is Fine Guest Fare

Charcoal broiling and the skewered dish of the Near East—Shish kebab—are a perfect team for informal entertaining. With just a bit of before-hand preparation you can invite your guests to skewer-their-own—fun for them and less work for you!

Shish Kebab for 4 to 6

Use shoulder or leg of lamb cut into 1 1/2 or 2-inch cubes. For 2 pounds of solid meat, place in a large bowl one medium-sliced onion, a few bay leaves, 1/2 teaspoon pepper and 2 teaspoons salt. Add lamb. Blend 1 cup of dry red wine (lemon juice may be used instead of wine) and 1/2 cup olive oil; pour over meat mixture. Soak the lamb cubes in this thin seasoned sauce for several hours to give the meat a distinctive flavor and prevent dryness.

Now you're ready for the skewers. Alternate marinated lamb with bay leaves, using about 4 to 5 meat cubes for each metal skewer. (If you don't have metal skewers, try green twigs.) Broil about ten minutes, or until browned, turning only once. The bay leaves will begin to glow near the edges imparting a savory, penetrating flavor to the meat.

With your Shish kebab you might serve rice pilaff or tossed salad—or that good old American favorite, corn on the cob.
