Don Hatfield, chairman of the Morrow county Republicans talked to the social economics class Tuesday. He told of differences in parties, election procedures, and how the parties work.

Wednesday, Al Lamb, who is chairman for the Democrats entertained the class with much the same topics. As a conclusion, everyone agreed that there isn't enough participation by the citizens even in such small but mighty important school elections. People do not seem to realize just what their obligation to the US is, or the importance of these doings. All were very glad to learn of the ways of both parties and the obligations they will be facing in the near future.
