OREGON'S FEDERAL AID HIGHWAY SYSTEM

By 1971, or soon after, this network of modern highways will link Oregon with the rest of the nation's interstate system. Made possible by the signing of the Federal Highway Act of 1956, Oregon has moved speedily into a new era of highway planning and construction. More highway construction was contracted during 1957 than in any other year in the history of the State Highway Department. During the 13-year scope over which the Federal Highway Act currently extends, Oregon will spend about $1,040,000,000 or an average of $80 million per year. This is nearly 25 percent more than the some $817 million spent during the entire 40-year existence of the state highway system. (a public service by the Cement Industry of Oregon)
