ROCK HOUNDS (Continued from page 2)

When it came time to dish up the ice cream, we found there were 27 present. George found he had to knock the dust off dishes and spoons that hadn't been used for some time.

George really did it again, this time on woods. Not the type for boat building, although it might have been ideal a few hundred thousand years ago, such as the petrified forests of California. It has been proven that it was not just one forest, but fifteen full grown mature forests buried one upon the other. Take the Redwoods of today, some 2000 years old multiply that by 15016 and it staggers the imagination. Allow time between lava flows for vegetation to start, what have you? That was just one of the many enlightening or puzzling things he brought out about woods.

Then from scenic pictures he showed he had a previous love before taking up rocks, some of those pictures were second to none. Thanks George it was good.

The Evans have invited the club to meet at their place the first meeting after the rush season is over. The third Saturday in September. If the weather remains as warm as it was at the last meeting I would suggest you conceal a bathing suit beneath your clothing so if someone hollers, th last one in is a negro baby, you want to be it. For as I remember, the pool is spot lighted and someone might flip the switch and it might be embarrassing if you tried a short cut.

If I find nothing more to write about someone else will inform you how the display at the fair and also at Evan's came out.

Columbia Wheat Rate Over Itana in Oregon

Itana, a new hard red winter bread-type wheat released for some areas of the Northwest, will not be recommended for Oregon, it was announced this week by D D Hill, Oregon State college farm crops department head.

Itana is similar to Columbia wheat released three years ago in Oregon as a hard red winter variety for low rainfall areas. Columbia is more smut resistant and higher yielding than Itana under Oregon growing conditions, Hill stated.

Washington State college this week released Itana for areas of less than 10 inches rainfall in Washington. Certified seed for commercial production in Washington will be available in the fall of 1959.

The new wheat is a selection from the cross Blackhull-Rex X Cheyenne made at the Oregon State college branch experiment station at Moro. Testing began in scattered areas of the Northwest in 1950. Idaho and Montana released Itana in 1956.

Columbia is resistant to all known races of both common and dwarf smut and has usually outyielded Rio, the commonly grown hard red winter wheat in the Columbia Basin. Because of Columbia's excellent performance in Oregon's low-rainfall areas, Hill stated, there is no point in releasing Itana in Oregon.
