

Over The Tee Cup

Noticed the Prineville golf club received quite a write up in the Sunday Oregonian. . . guess I will have to get on the "golf ball" and pen an article about the Willow Creek country club. After all, our course is probably one of a very few in the states built entirely by it's own members and mostly by hand at that.

Speaking of writing I guess I had better get down to the business of this column. . . and so to work. Our ladies day turnout Tuesday was small but rewarding, as seven of the 12 gals playing, shot the nefarious nine holes in the forties. Those playing were Ruth Van Winkle, Rita Wolff, Coramae Ferguson, Delores McDowell, Daisy Collins, Kay Robinson, Beverly Gunderson, Dee Gribble, Marie McQuarrie, Arolene Laird, and Shirley Loyd. I luckily shot low gross (40) for the day, Shirley won the prize for the most hole's pated (2) and Daisy and Arolene tied for the lowest number of strokes on the hidden hole.

It seemed good to have Dee Gribble back with us for ladies day after an absence of several weeks. And speaking of Dee, she and "Grib" had guests from Pendleton over the weekend, who play championship golf at Pendleton; and they thought our course was trickier and more fun than their's. (I will just have to write that article and let the world know about our wonderful little course.)

I missed out on all the stupendous shots, precarious putts and hilarious happenings ladies day, as Ruth and I were all finished with our nine holes before anyone else started playing. But I must say that the old ball was bouncing for Ruth all morning. On her second shot on the No 1 hole the ball was going lickity split off to the right but hit the dragger, came to a sudden stop and then ricocheted at a 45 degree angle to the left and landed right next to the pin. Then on the No 3 hole her drive was headed straight for the dreaded swamp but hit a board and bounced up to within five feet of the green. (Rip may have slept for years, but this Van Winkle was really awake and on the ball, or at least the bounce was.)

The course, as usual, was packed Sunday evening and noticed quite a contingent of golfers from Lexington. (I guess Judge Carmichael has given the golf fever to some of the residents there.) We talked to Gene Hall just as he was starting his second nine, and asked him how he did on the first round; but he said he'd tell us some other time. (Now wonder what he meant by that?)

OBSERVATIONS: Velma Glass with a new set of golf clubs. . . Hester Creswick still without a golf cart. . . Harold and Arolene Laird on the course every free moment. . . Stuart Gribble shooting a 34. . . Al Mattoon in the hospital with a bad back (could be he strained it while lifting the box of lost and found golf balls at the hotel, so for pity's sake please, please check the box and retrieve yours).

Until next week, that's par for now.
