County Agent's News
 gather a craft from each unit and compile them together in a booklet so that each unit would have several small crafts to choose from in the making of holiday gifts. A project leaders meeting will be held in time to make this lesson available before Christmas.
 Come spring we all want to know the latest about spring fashions, new fabrics, and finishes, how to sew them, how to launder them and many more questions. These questions will be answered in the "New Fabrics and Finishes" lesson chosen by the group.
 The agent lesson will be on color. I will be visiting each unit with this lesson and give you some basic information on how color effects us in everything we do, how we dress, how we decorate our house, how we serve our food, and ways in which color effects our personality.

 I was well pleased with the program planners choice for the year. I think it will be an interesting and informative year for the Extension Units.
 If any individual or other organization is interested in any of these lessons you know where your telephone is—just call me.

Machines and Fertilizers Help Farmers Trim Costs
 Use of more machinery and fertilizer and less manpower and horsepower is helping the state's farmers hold the line against rising costs, according to Mrs Elvira Horrell, extension agricultural economist at Oregon State college.
 Although last year's farm output was a third larger than in 1940, it was produced on the same acreage of cropland by fewer farmworkers and on fewer but larger farms. Mrs Horrell noted.
 Farmers have learned more about how to use commercial fertilizers in recent years, she pointed out, and these fertilizers have become cheaper in relation to land and other costs of production. Fertilizer costs have gone up only about 6 percent in the last 10 years. Land values have risen about 40 percent, and other production costs have gone up from 20 to 25 percent.
 During the same period, new machines have been developed and old machines improved, eliminating the need for many horses and farm laborers, Mrs Horrell noted. Wage rates paid farm workers have increased 30 percent in the last 10 years, but costs of operating farm machinery have gone up only about half that much. As a result, use of tractors and other machines has nearly tripled, while use of hired labor on farms has been on the downturn.
