

Helicopter Used In Mountain Rescue Of Boardmanite

Mrs Mabel Allen, wife of Arthur Allen of Boardman, is in a satisfactory condition at an Enterprise hospital following a fall from her horse in the Wallowa mountains Wednesday of last week. Mrs Allen suffered severe bruises, shock and exposure when thrown from her horse in the isolated Anerold Lake area of the Wallowa Mountains, which is about 7 miles from Wallowa Lake. The Allens were on a horseback trip from Anerold Lake to the Innaha River country, from where they planned to go out by Hawkins Pass. Allen stated they had stopped on the trail about a mile beyond the lake, and that his wife was sitting on her horse completely relaxed and with one foot out of the stirrup, looking at a map. The snapping of the map apparently frightened the horse, which whirled off the trail and started down the rocky slope. Mrs Allen fell and landed on her back. Then she had to ride the longest mile she ever rode, back to Anerold Lake. Her husband and two other men walked beside the horse to hold her on.

The help came from another trail party in the area, of which fortunately, Dr Keith Markee of Portland, was a member. After a second check on her condition at the lake, Dr Markee stated she should be taken to a hospital only by stretcher.

The Wallowa Mountains Rescue Team and Clarence Tucker, a Lewiston newsman, set the wheels in operation to get the U S Air Force helicopter from Portland to fly the injured woman out to a hospital. It was piloted by First Lt Thomas E Sallows and Dennis M Chase, and was guided into the rugged territory by Eldon Down, La-Grande area chief of the Air Search and Rescue Organization of the Oregon Board of Aeronautics. The flight into the 7800 foot altitude was made difficult by a threatening thunderstorm. Mrs Allen was carried into the helicopter on a mattress, then placed on a built in stretcher in the cargo section of the craft. It landed at the Enterprise airport and the badly bruised woman was rushed to the hospital. Allen made the return trip from Anerold Lake on horseback.

The Allens, who have lived in Boardman about 25 years, where Allen operates a service station, make the trip to the Wallowa mountains every summer. They had been gone about ten days on this one. Allen, who returned home during the weekend, stated that it was indefinite how long his wife would have to remain in the hospital, that it would be a week or more. He said that although there were no fractures, she is being kept under observation.

(Continued from Page 1) and burned across Eightmile canyon and clear to Fourmile canyon before being stopped. The fire covered an area about 12 miles long. Fire trucks from Ione, Arlington and Cecil aided in the fight. Some stubble was lost on the Woods and Logan ranches, but most of the loss was grass and sagebrush.

Heppner firemen answered an alarm Sunday night to the Ralph Richmond home on Gilmore street where a trash fire was mistaken for a grass blaze. There was no damage.

Changes Noted in 1959 Soil Bank

The acreage reserve program for reducing allotment crop acreage is not available for 1959, it was announced this week by the county ASC office.

Although the payment rate per acre for reducing allotment crops generally has been higher under the acreage reserve program than under the conservation reserve program, new features of the conservation reserve program for next year (which covers both allotment and non-allotment crop acreage) may be sufficient to interest many farmers in that program, it was stated.

The level of annual payments under the 1959 conservation reserve will be, in many cases, substantially higher than in previous years. One of the new features is a premium payment to those producers placing all their eligible land in the program.

ASC officials said that farmers should compare the net income they normally receive from the operation of their farm with the net income they will receive under the conservation reserve program if they place all or part of their eligible land in the program.

The program is voluntary and additional information on it is available at the ASC office in Heppner.
