Chats With Your Home Agent

By ESTHER KIRKIS

I was in Pendleton two evenings this past week to witness two widely varied activities—a "Meat Information" school and the district "Make It Yourself With Wool" contest.

Saturday, I was happy to accompany Mrs Walter Wright and her daughter, Janet, to Pendleton where Janet entered the district "Make It Yourself With Wool" contest. This is a national contest with district and state run-offs prior to the national contest held in January in Portland. Twenty-three girls took part in the Umatilla-Morrow county district contest held at Pendleton that day. We were very pleased to see that Janet placed second in the senior division. Although she doesn't get a chance to participate in the state contest this year, Janet has obtained the experience of participating and is tentatively making plans for next year's contest.

Janet modeled a one piece dress and jacket of heliotrope wool crepe. (Garments entered in this contest must be 100% wool, of course). The pinkish purple color compliments Janet's petite blondness. The waist length bloused jacket is tied with a bow, and had a three-quarter kimono sleeves with cuffs, when the jacket is removed it revealed a lovely bare-shouldered "date" dress with strapped shoulders ending with a soft bow. Judges said her construction was nearly perfect.

Joan Reeder, Pendleton, who won first place in the senior division, was no stranger to Janet. The two girls have been meeting in 4-H style revues at the state fair at Salem for several years and at last year's wool contest. This outfit won Joan the state 4-H championship in wools at Salem this year. Joan's ensemble consisted of a gray and navy plaid coat and a navy sheath dress. We therefore, felt that Janet was pitted against some pretty stiff competition.

4-H CLUB NEWS

As second place winner, Janet received a McCall's "Book of Sewing" valued around $9.00.

Mrs Clint Lewis, Pendleton, district wool contest director spoke to me after the contest and wondered if there wasn't something we could do to interest more Morrow county girls in joining in on this contest. I would therefore, urge 4-H girls and home economics students enrolled in advance sewing to keep this contest in mind when they select the material for their sewing project. It might just as well be 100% wool so that they would be eligible for both 4-H, FFA, and wool contest competition. There are numerous prizes ranging all the way from skirt lengths of wool material to a two week trip in Europe. For further information on the wool contest, contact Mrs Robert Hoskins, lone, Morrow county director, or our extension office. Remember, there's always another contest!

On Tuesday evening, county agent Neils and Mrs Anderson; Mrs Katherine Hager, home economics instructor of Heppner school, and myself attended a meat information school sponsored by the National Livestock and Meat Board of Chicago. The three hour program was presented by William Robichaud, of the merchandising dept staff of the National Livestock and Meat Board and by Miss Dorothy Sherrill, consumer marketing specialist, of Oregon State college extension service.

The object of this meeting, one of five being held in the state, is to acquaint members of the extension service and other educational groups with the materials and information available through the National Livestock and Meat Board and to bring the latest and most up-to-date information on meat selection, care, cooking and nutritional importance to those directly concerned with carrying the meat story to the general public.

The evening was enjoyable as we watched Mr Robichaud show ways of deriving several meals from one large cut of meat and demonstrate techniques of carving cooked meat. (He gave away those cooked meats as door prizes. None of us from Morrow county were lucky enough to receive one, however).

Funny how the thing you remember most is the jokes you hear! After we had been sitting about two hours, Mr Robichaud asked us if we know what the slogan "L S M F T" meant. To him it meant, "Let's Stand—My Fanny's Tired!"... Needless to say, we got up and stretched.
